Town enacts full water ban

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Disconnect those sprinklers; you won't be needing them, even at night, as the town of Cohasset entered a full watering ban on Thursday, Sept. 1. In case you missed or ignored the reverse-911 Code Red call on Tuesday, here's everything you need to know.

■ No outside irrigation is allowed at any time. No daytime watering is allowed – not even manually. Manually watering with a handheld hose is allowed for ornamental plants and vegetable gardens between the hours of 5 p.m. and 9 a.m.

■ Violators will be fined up to $100 per day of non-compliance.

■ Four environmental triggers have sent Cohasset into this level four drought warning.

■ First, the town has experienced three cumulative months of less than 40 percent of normal rainfall. Second, it has experienced six cumulative months of less than 30 percent of normal rainfall. Third, the Aaron River Reservoir has dropped below a 300-day supply of water.

■ Fourth and finally, the weir that releases water from Lily Pond into Bound Brook is now higher than the water level, and no water is entering Bound Brook.

Despite all that, Cohasset still has it better than most of its neighbors, who have been at a level four drought warning with full watering ban for the past month. The backup drinking water supply at Aaron River Reservoir has so far spared Cohasset from more severe restrictions.

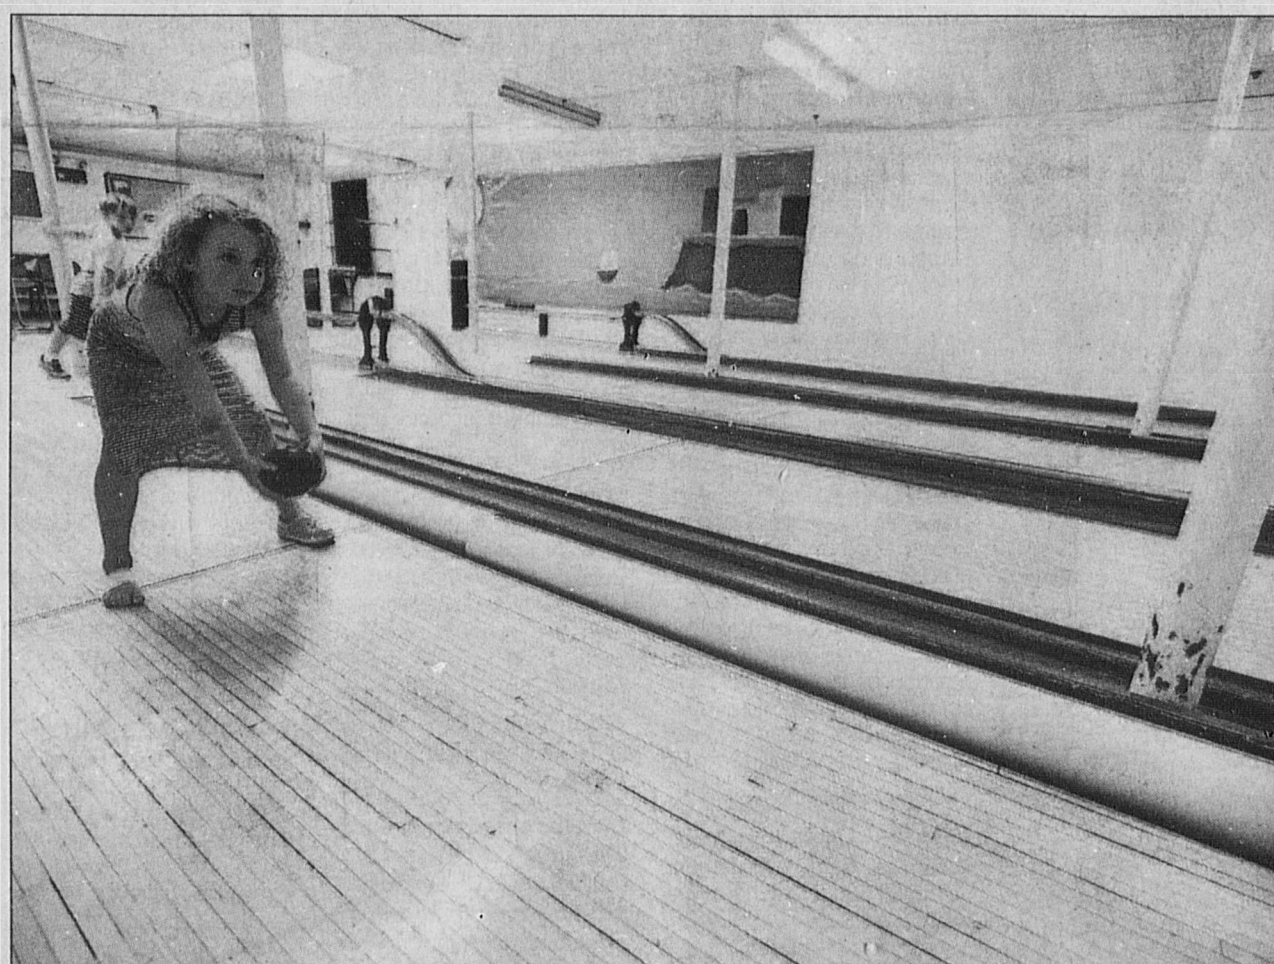

Scituate is in especially dire straits with, allegedly, only 20 days' worth of water

Hear that? That's the sound of 121 teachers collectively sharpening their pencils. Cohasset students go back to school on Tuesday, Sept. 6, and the schools are more than ready to have them.

"We are wildly prepared," said Cohasset High School Principal Carolyn Connolly. "We don't seem to have any of the last-minute stresses that we usually have. Everything is ready."

Data on par with professional labs

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

It's just before 8 a.m. on one of the last Tuesdays of summer vacation, but Charlotte Morrison and Caroline Adams are awake, caffeinated, and ready to dive (or at least wade) into the day's assignment at the Cohasset Center for Student Coastal Research.

In a few minutes, once they've packed up their equipment, they'll be walking knee-deep into the ocean to collect water samples. Morrison, a senior at Cohasset High School, and Adams, a senior at Notre Dame Academy, have been testing for bacteria along local shores all summer long.

But these tests aren't just an educational exercise for students. Jack Buckley, the director of the center, is on a mission to prove that his students' results are just as good as the ones reached by G & L, the professional lab that conducts water testing for the Cohasset Board of Health.

The Board of Health uses the results of these tests to determine whether beaches are safe for swimmers or need to be closed due to unsafe bacteria levels. Specifically, it's enterococci that they're looking to identify: a sign that fecal matter has contaminated the water.

Enterococci levels rise after it rains because the runoff washes uncollected waste from dogs and other animals into the water. But beaches only have to be closed if

No cigarettes for teen with fake ID

By Mary Ford
mford@wickedlocal.com

False ID

Police said a 17-year-old Cohasset boy has been using a fake Florida license to try and buy cigarettes at the Mobil Mart at Sohler Street and Route 3A. The clerk at the convenience store called police on Saturday morning (Aug. 27) to report that the teen became verbally abusive and harassing when he was refused the sale. The clerk provided the plate number of his car and police went to his home and talked to his parents who are going to handle the matter. The minimum age to purchase tobacco in Cohasset is 21.

Boat assist

The harbormaster was able to lift a boat off a trailer that was attached to a pickup truck that had broken down at the foot of Parker Avenue by the ramp on Monday morning (Aug. 22). The 2006 Toyota pickup and trailer were then towed. The owner, who had been trying to arrange a tow, arrived at the scene. There was concern as the tide was rising that the trailer and boat were going to go underwater, police said.

MV stop/tow

A 23-year-old Norwell man is being summonsed to court following a traffic stop on Summer Street in Scituate around 5:45 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 22). An officer on patrol saw the 2010 BMW traveling at a high rate of speed on Beechwood Street, including observing it pass another car. The officer caught up with the BMW over the town line in Scituate. A check through the Registry of Motor Vehicles showed the operator had a revoked license. He is facing charges of operating with a revoked license, operating to endanger, failure to drive in marked lanes and speeding, police said. His car was towed.

Dog stuck

A passerby stopped near Pond and Spring streets to check on the loose dog with a line attached to it on Monday evening (Aug. 22) around 9:30 p.m. The Good Samaritan pulled over and inadvertently parked on the line so the dog was stuck under his car and growling. He was afraid to move the car for fear of hurting the dog. In the meantime, a resident had called about a missing dog that had broken free. The owner and dog were soon reunited.

MV stop/tow

An officer on patrol on Tuesday (Aug. 23) around 9:19 a.m. stopped a 2004 Volvo SUV on King Street because the vehicle's plates had expired. The plates were nonrenewable due to unpaid tickets or excise taxes so the SUV was towed. The 65-year-old Marshfield woman driving was issued a $105 citation, police said.

Vandalism

Police talked to the parents of a 15-year-old Cohasset boy who was with other youths when a report came through about teens at the Community Center playground "breaking things" on Tuesday night (Aug. 23) around 9:30 p.m. Broken was the white arbor at the entrance, bits of which were strewn about the walkway, police said.

A customer at Doolley's across the street approached the officers and described the alleged culprits. Police located the youths walking, identified the boy responsible for the damage and spoke to his parents, who will pay to have the structure replaced.

Wrong spot

The 42-year-old Cohasset woman who parked her 2011 Jeep Grand Cherokee in a spot reserved for life-guards at Sandy Beach was located and moved her vehicle. The call came in on Wednesday afternoon (August 24).

MVA

Police responded to a two-car crash at Chief Justice Cushing Highway (Route 3A) and Beechwood Street on Wednesday (Aug. 24) at 5 p.m.

A 2005 Mini Cooper, operated by a 18-year-old Hingham woman was headed south when the Mini attempted a left onto Beechwood in the path of 2006 Toyota Camry that was headed north through the intersection. The Camry was operated by a 48-year-old Scituate man, police said.

Both vehicles were towed; there were no reported injuries. The driver of the Mini was cited for failure to yield the right-of-way.

Larceny

A 51-year-old Cohasset woman went to the station with her 13-year-old son on Friday morning (Aug. 26) to report that her son's $40 backpack had been stolen; inside the backpack was a $600 iPhoneS. The boy had parked his bike with the backpack at the foot of Government Island near the Border Street Bridge and when he returned about 90 minutes later, his backpack was gone, police said.

MV stop/tow

An officer on patrol at Beechwood Street and Chief Justice Cushing Highway (3A), queried the plate of a 2000 Dodge Durango that passed by that revealed the registered owner, a 36-year-old Scituate man, had a suspended license for a payment default. He stopped the vehicle that was towed and the Scituate man is being summonsed to court to face the charge of operating with a suspended license, police said.

Towed

A Subaru with Vermont plates was ticketed and towed from Wadleigh Park because it was impeding traffic on Saturday afternoon (Aug. 27). The car is registered to a woman from Woodstock, Vt.

MV stop/tow

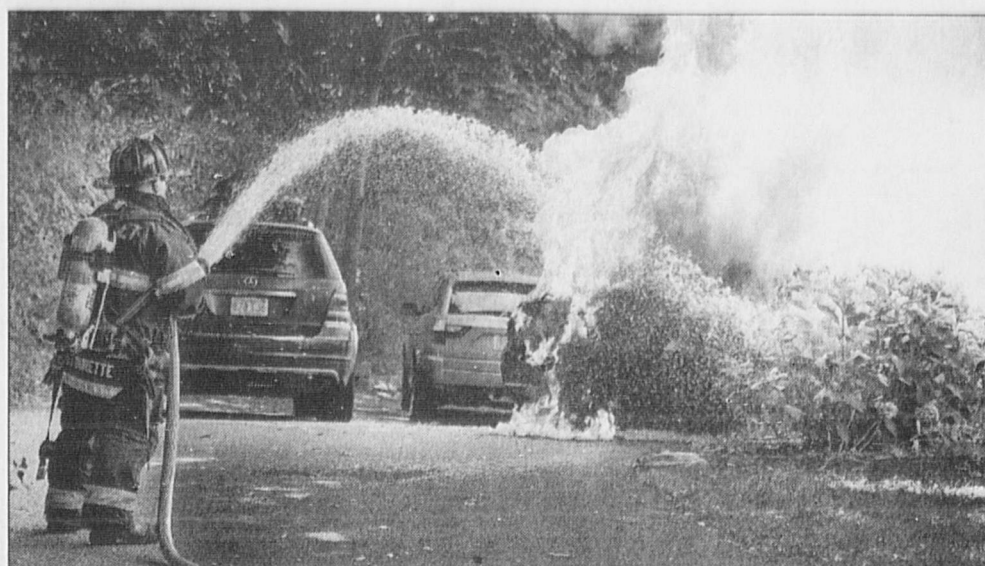

An officer stopped a 2005 Jeep Liberty with a faulty taillight and expired plates on Sunday (Aug. 28) around 1:29 a.m. on N. Main Street. A check through the Registry showed the driver, a 39-year-old Hingham woman, had a suspended license. The Jeep was towed and the woman is being summonsed to court to face the charges of operating with a suspended license, operating an unregistered motor vehicle, and operating with defective equipment. She called a friend to give her a ride home, police said. Her license was suspended due to a payment default.

Altercation

An altercation between a group of Cohasset and Hingham kids that occurred on Sunday night (Aug. 28) on Atlantic Avenue near Whitehead Road is still under investigation. One of the Cohasset youths had a split lip and there were reports that someone brandished a knife. Detectives are conducting interviews with those involved, police said.

LAST THURSDAY

Car fire doused on S. Main Street

On Thursday (Aug. 25) at 1:47 p.m. Engine 3, Engine 1 and Ambulance 1 were dispatched to 405 South Main St. for a reported car fire.

On arrival of the scene members discovered a motor vehicle fully involved parked in front of detached 1-1/2 story wooden two bay garage.

Command was established and box three was paged out for station coverage for off duty personnel. Members then stretched a hose line to start to extinguish the car fire. Command-2 arrived on scene took over command and request a box alarm call back to be paged out for a building fire has the car fire had now extended into the garage.

Ladder 1 also responded to the scene with additional personnel and a second hose line was stretched to extinguish the fire in the garage. An engine company and a chief officer from Scituate responded to the scene to assist members in extinguishing the fire. The car and building fire were knocked within 30 minutes and crew remained on scene for an additional hour overhauling and cleaning up the scene. No injuries were reported and an engine company from Hingham covered fire headquarters while units were tied up at the scene.

ELECTION

State primary set for Thursday, Sept. 8

Features abundance of write-in candidates

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Democrats and Republicans may be on different sides of the fence for the state primary elections on Thursday, Sept. 8, but they can agree on one thing: this ballot is unlike anything they've seen before.

"This is a very unique election due to the timing of Representative Bradley's departure," said Kevin McCarthy, chairman of the Board of Selectmen and an active democrat in town. "It's a difficult and odd time for an election – on a Thursday, in between the spring and fall elections."

The other thing Democrats and Republicans can agree on? Write-ins.

"The most important thing for voters to know is a housekeeping item," said Jack Creighton, chairman of the Republican Town

Committee. "After they do a write-in, they have to remember to check the box."

This applies whether candidates are asking voters to write their name by hand or affix a pre-made sticker. Filling in that bubble triggers the voting machines to separate ballots with write-in responses so they can be counted by hand.

Town Clerk Carol St. Pierre said that she'll have to look through every ballot anyway, but having them sorted correctly will definitely make the process easier.

"Tallying the votes will be a time-consuming process," St. Pierre said. "We have no idea how long it will take."

That's because, regardless of which party's ballot a voter pulls, this "unique" election is fraught with write-in candidates. Voters can write in their chosen candidate(s) on any ballot, regardless of party affiliation, but they'll definitely need to know who they're voting for before they arrive at the polls.

"With this election, we've seen the advent of the United Independent Party in Cohasset and in this region. It's good for vibrant democracy."

—Kevin McCarthy

And if they get confused at the polls, they'll just have to sort it out themselves, because election workers are not allowed to answer any questions about the ballot.

Democrats will have to be especially careful, because what's officially on the ballot doesn't reflect the reality of the race. Representative Garrett Bradley, a Hingham Democrat, resigned unexpectedly in early July – but his name is still on the ballot.

In fact, in the category of State Representative, Bradley's name is the only one there. That means voters will have to write someone in, or affix a sticker if their chosen candidate supplied them.

It gets more complicated. Joan Meschino, a

Hull Democrat, is vying for Bradley's seat in the Massachusetts House of Representatives – but on the ballot, she's listed in the State Senator category. Meschino fans will have to remember to cast a write-in vote for her as a representative.

There are no such trick questions on the Republican, Green/Rainbow Party, or United Independent Party ballots, but there are plenty of blank lines for write-in candidates, so be sure to do your homework no matter which party you support.

"It's interesting how, in today's divided politics and disenchantment with the political process, we're seeing the rise of third- and fourth-party candidates," observed McCarthy. "With this election, we've seen the advent of the United Independent Party in Cohasset and in this region. It's good for vibrant democracy."

"It's healthy democracy in action," Creighton agreed. "There's been a lot of activity on the grassroots level. We've seen spirited campaigns on both sides. Whenever you have highly qualified candidates competing, then the citizens are the beneficiary. What's also been very, very nice is that this is the cleanest primary – nobody is attacking each other."

Creighton said this could bode well for voter turnout, although he admits that it could be an issue, since the election is being held on a Thursday instead of on the more traditional Tuesday.

"I think Charlie Baker has shown that good leadership can make a difference no matter what the prevailing orthodoxy is," Creighton commented. "In the bluest of blue states, we have a Republican governor who has really made a difference, and Republicans are coming out to vote because they have a leader they can believe in."

McCarthy agreed that turnout could be a challenge due to the election's timing, but he's optimistic.

"We're going to have very new representation in the Senate and State Rep seats," McCarthy said. "It's more important than ever that people get out and make their preferences known, because these people have a big impact on our everyday lives."

The State Primary takes place on Thursday, Sept. 8. Polls will be open at Cohasset Town Hall from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Out of 5,884 registered voters, the Town Clerk anticipates 10 to 15 percent turnout. 39 absentee ballots had been returned as of press time. The majority of registered voters are unenrolled and can pull any ballot in the primary.

the levels stay elevated for multiple days. If the next test comes back normal, then the beach is safe to swim at.

"Our beaches are extremely clean," said Morrison. "So far, we've only had one day that our levels were over the legal limit, and they went back to normal the next day. So that may have been because there was a dog swimming near where we took the samples, or some fish we didn't notice."

Twice a week, Morrison, Adams, and others collect two samples from each of three Cohasset sites: Bassing Beach, Sandy Beach, and Rocky Beach. One sample is sent to G & L for analysis. The other is analyzed in-house. Students also collect data such as water temperature, salinity, and dissolved oxygen.

Some days, there will be as many as six students working on this task. Margaret Curley, a Cohasset High School freshman; Joe Sweeney, a Scituate High School alum and current UMass Amherst student; Kelsey McCunney, a senior at the University of South Carolina; and Margaret Winn, an aquarium intern who is living with family in Cohasset for the summer, have been involved throughout the season.

After collecting the samples, students return to the research center to process them.

First, the working surface is meticulously disinfected – they can't have stray bacteria getting into the samples, or it could give them a false high reading.

Then, the samples are diluted with deionized water prepared in an autoclave, which raises it to a high temperature and pressure – again, to avoid contamination by stray bacteria.

The students then add a powder called Enterolert, which is food for enterococci bacteria. To dissolve the powder, they cap the container and roll it carefully on the sterile countertop – roll, not shake, because shaking would create air bubbles, and that could distort the reading.

Finally, they pour the solution into a special tray that's divided into 48 large wells and 49 small ones. The tray is sealed and placed in an incubator for 24 hours, during which time the bacteria will feed on the Enterolert.

Fast forward.

After 24 hours, wells containing bacteria will bioluminesce – that is, glow – under a black light. The number of glowing wells is compared with a chart, and if it indicates more than 104 colony-forming units in the sample, then the site is flagged.

The results, said Buckley, have been consistent with findings from G & L and are always within the 95 percent confidence limit, which means that the data is solid even if it shows a slight discrepancy from the G & L results. Slight discrepancies are normal, since bacteria may not be evenly distributed in water.

Conclusion? The Board of Health could be using this data from local students with just as much confidence as it uses data from the lab. And Buckley would love nothing more than to see his research center certified to provide that sort of trusted data to the community.

"I'm looking into it," he said.

Cohasset Water Commissioner Rolf Gjestebey said it's not quite as bad as it sounds.

Gjestebey said that Scituate has tapped into a couple of wells and will be able to use water from there for a little while. But the possibility is still very real that, if it doesn't rain substantially in the coming days, Scituate may need to buy water from Cohasset.

The service would be offered to Scituate at the same price that Cohasset Water Department offers to its regular customers. Contrary to some concerns, Gjestebey clarified that the town does not intend to sell water at a profit during these emergency circumstances.

The mechanism for sharing is ready to go. Cohasset water can be transferred into Scituate via a connection in the Beechwood part of town, where a fire hydrant-style hose can be applied to connect the two systems.

The water department checked the pressure at the site two weeks ago and is just waiting to hear back from Scituate about their needs. As of Tuesday, Aug. 30, Scituate had not returned to Cohasset with a proposal.

AROUND TOWN

As school starts, follow the rules!

Greetings

Hi there Cohasset, Happy September and, Happy Labor Day Weekend! I feel like I just wrote Happy June, start of summer but now, it is Labor Day and back-to-school time. I hope that whatever you are all doing for the weekend that it is filled if possible with family and friends, moments of fun that can turn into memories that will last forever. Stay safe and enjoy Labor Day Weekend 2016, 1-4-3!

Schools In

After the holiday of course, we then have the exciting start of school. The first week is always a tricky one in many ways even with the excitement and fun. Buses are starting the routes with new children, many stops and this means a lot of parents/children will be adjusting as well to crossing roads, getting off and on bus etc. Please everyone driving out there both in the morning and afternoon, SLOW DOWN! If a bus stops, you stop!

Pay attention to all rules when you are dropping off and picking up in the lines at schools. It is pretty black and white how it all works and nothing is worse than having "issues" from the beginning just because. Follow the rules, the lines, wait your turn and all is good.(plus, I won't get any messages for a while, lol)

Most of all, have fun with the kiddos, take pictures if they let you and wipe your tears(or cheer) once they leave! Those moments become the memories and our babies grow up so darn fast!

Roger Williams

Congratulations to Nicole

JENNIFER PIEPENBRINK

Robbins, daughter of Pam & Wayne Robbins who has graduated from Roger Williams University and received a Master of Science Degree in Criminal Justice. Nicole graduated with a 3.9 GPA, unbelievable and what an accomplishment! Nicole, your family & friends could not be any prouder. It will be so exciting to hear your future plans, best of wishes in all that you do!

CONSERVATORY NOTES

Explore the Arts Open House

By Lorna Jane Norris

Breaking news! There was a rare sighting in the lobby of South Shore Conservatory last week, as a preschool child spotted the almost-extinct untamed French horn lurking in a corner. Onlookers held their breath as the horn let out in a beautiful cry. News spread, and reports of other unusual sightings started flooding in: a wild striped bassoon at Hingham Middle School, a suspicious spotted tuba at the Pembroke Stop & Shop, and at the conservatory's Duxbury campus, there were reports of a herd of harps!

As South Shore Conservatory's Vice President of Education, I am an expert in rare instrument breeds. I quickly reassured the public that the apparent migration of endangered instruments to the South Shore is due to the conservatory's upcoming Explore the Arts Open House on Sunday, Sept. 11, which will allow young participants to actually touch a tuba, handle a harp or ogle an oboe.

The Explore the Arts Open House, which takes place from 2 to 4 p.m., is a free, fun opportunity for children from ages 0 to 18 to explore all of the group arts programs and ensembles the conservatory has to offer, including our legendary Time Train percussion class, Piano FUNDamentals, Music Together, Rock Band, drama and hip-hop classes. South Shore Conservatory's Suzuki faculty will be on hand as well the directors from our large ensemble programs, Bay Youth Symphony (BaYS) and our youth chorus program Pure Treble. Explorers will be issued a passport and challenged to try out as many arts programs as possible during a scavenger hunt. The very bravest explorers are welcome to visit the endangered instrument enclosure.

We are very proud that, in addition to private lesson program and an arts-integrated preschool, pre-k and kindergarten, the South Shore Conservatory has over 90 weekly group classes and ensembles for ages 0-18. Participation in these programs allow students to share in their creative learning with others, meet new friends and create art together. These group classes are an affordable way to try out a new learning experience. Students already committed to another time consuming discipline, such as private lessons or sports, find that joining a community such as BaYS or a Rock Band can be a great social and emotional outlet.

The South Shore Conservatory, the largest community school for the arts in New England, is a wonderful community resource right in your backyard. One parent recently shared, "The time spent at the South Shore Conservatory is my child's best time of the week!"

So, come and have some fun exploring the arts with us on Sept. 11. Our incredible teaching artists are excited to meet you and your family. Each new school age student who signs up for a fall class or ensemble that day is entitled to a 15 percent discount, or 10 percent to be used anytime within the academic year. Students signing up for lessons on the suspicious spotted tuba or any other endangered instrument, receive a free trial lesson and $100 off tuition for the 2016-17 academic year.

For information, visit www.sscmusic.org, find us on Facebook, or call Lorna Jane Norris at 781-749-7565 x 23. South Shore Conservatory is located at One Conservatory Drive in Hingham and 64 St. George Street in Duxbury.

GIMME SHELTER

Miss Daisy is purr-fectly delightful

If you are looking for a best friend, Daisy may well be the girl for you.

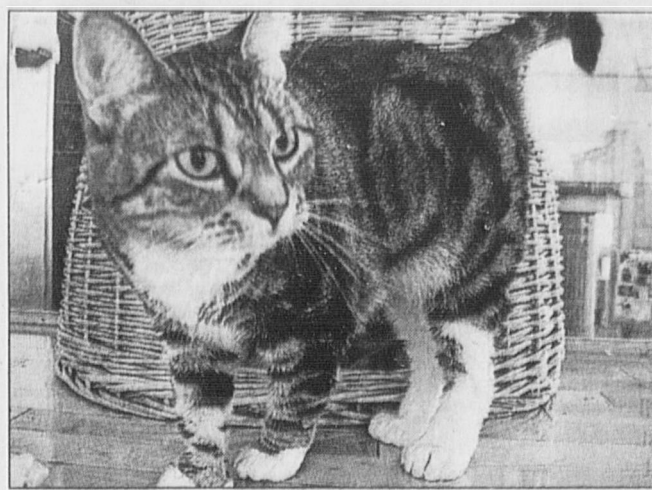

By Tammy Hatch

Meet Daisy, an 8-year-old mackerel patterned, polydactyl tabby with white haired chest and paws, glowing green eyes and tiny brush strokes of orange fur accenting her beautiful face.

Daisy was surrendered by owners who lived in a home overcrowded by more pets than they were able to adequately care for. Although Daisy lived with other animals, she hasn't made an adjustment to shelter life where everything is unfamiliar and prefers the comfort of her condo.

When Daisy is shown attention, however, she immediately engages with you and responds with delight to sweet talk by rolling her head into your hand and nudging you for cheek rubs. Tabbies are well known to be warmly affectionate and truly enjoy being in the company of humans.

Daisy clearly possesses these uniquely special traits and will make an excellent companion pet.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Joan Meschino

Joan Meschino, 51, lives in Hull with her husband John. She is a non-profit executive, attorney and a graduate of Hull High School. She holds a B.A. from Harvard University and a J.D. from the University of New Hampshire School of Law. Meschino is a write-in candidate for state representative for the Third Plymouth District in the democratic primary.

Civic involvement:

Served two terms as a selectman in Hull and currently serve on the Metropolitan Area Planning Council's Executive Committee, Metropolitan Beaches Commission, and Hull Capital Outlay Committee. Represented Hull on the MBTA Advisory Board. Was honored with a "2014 Top Women in Law" award by Mass. Lawyers Weekly. Served on the Board of Directors of the Women's Bar Association of Mass., and currently serves on the WBA's Women's Leadership Initiative and on the Mass. Bar Association's Access to Justice Section Council. Member of the Hull Lifesaving Museum Board of Directors.

What experience has best prepared you to serve as a State Representative?

Having been a selectman means I've worked on the challenges facing our community, up close and personal. I know what we are capable of achieving on the South Shore, and I know from experience how the state can best assist local communities in meeting our challenges.

Favorite quote: "Courage is what it takes to stand up and speak; courage is also what it takes to sit down and listen." -- Winston Churchill

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life? I'm the daughter of a high school teacher and a school nurse. They taught me that if you work hard and play by the rules, you should have access to a good job, a great education, and limitless opportunity. They inspire me to give back to the community I love.

What would people be surprised to know about you? I put myself through college by working as a sternman on my father's lobster boat, and I still occasionally help out my brother, a lobsterman.

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8? My years of experience as a local elected official and a social justice advocate uniquely qualify me to partner with civic and municipal leaders to tackle the issues that are important to our community. As a former Selectman and active member of numerous community organizations, I bring a different perspective to government — one using regional collaboration to give the South Shore a stronger voice. I have a comprehensive plan for addressing the major issues impacting the South Shore, ranging from combating global climate change and sea level rise, providing resources to tackle the opiate crisis devastating our communities, and investing in education and transportation infrastructure.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

John C. Brannan

John C. Brannan, 64, is general manager for a sales representative organization; he and his wife Lita live in Hull. Brannan holds a BA from Ohio Wesleyan University. Brannan is a write-in candidate for state representative in the republican primary for the Third Plymouth District.

Civic involvement: My journey in local government started with a complaint I filed with the Zoning Board of Appeals. Based on my presentation to the board, I was later asked to join as a member. Founded the Fort Revere Restoration Committee and Hull's parking committee. Founding member of the Hull Nantasket Rotary and continues to be a member of the Hull Chamber of Commerce. Served two terms on the Hull Board of Selectmen. Continues to be engaged in many local charities and events.

What experience has best prepared you to serve as a state representative?

businessman, and two-term selectman, I have the experience necessary to deliver results for our communities. Having had my own start-up company with 10 employees coupled with my municipal experience I have a deep understanding for balanced budgets and strategic long term planning.

Favorite quote: "If we do not learn from history, we are bound to repeat it."

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life? My Father. He was a man of great integrity, honesty, quiet spoken, loved his family, worked hard to provide for his family and their futures.

What would people be surprised to know about you? I have sailed over 20K miles off shore in the Gulf of Mexico and Caribbean. I have hitchhiked across the US and Western Europe.

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8? As a businessman, I've learned that nothing matters more than your word, your integrity and your ability to get things done. As your State Representative, I will bring the same set of standards to Beacon Hill. I believe with fiscal responsibility and maintaining an open line of communication we will be able to resolve the issues of today and tomorrow. Finally, I believe good ideas don't have party designations, and Beacon Hill needs more open minds and less party politics. I believe experience matters, and I ask for your vote to deliver results, not rhetoric from Beacon Hill.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Stephen Burm

Stephen Burm, democrat candidate for the Third Plymouth District. COURTESY PHOTO

Stephen Burm, 39, is a State and Local Government Relations Manager with the International Council of Shopping Centers (ICSC). He and his wife, Lauren, live in Hingham with their children, Matthew (age 4) and Caroline (age 2). He is a graduate of Hingham Public Schools and Catholic Memorial High School. He holds a B.S. and an MBA from Fitchburg State College. Burm is a write-in candidate for state representative in the Third Plymouth District in the democratic primary.

Civic involvement:

Entering sixth season as a volunteer Hingham Youth Hockey Coach. Coaches the Bantam A Team which consists of seventh- eighth- and ninth-graders.

What experience has best prepared you to serve as a state representative? I worked for former Representative Garrett Bradley for nine years serving as his Chief of Staff. This experience allowed me to work on behalf of the residents of the district on a variety of issues ranging from healthcare, elder services, transportation, education and small business related issues. I also managed his legislative and budget agenda and made sure the office provided high level constituent services.

Favorite quote: "All Politics is Local" -- Thomas "Tip" O'Neil.

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life? My parents -- I was taught at an early age that if you work hard you can accomplish anything.

What would people be surprised to know about you? My wife Lauren and I met at the State House and proposed to her there.

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8? I respectfully ask for your vote in the Democratic Primary on September 8th. Having spent the majority of my professional career working hand in hand with Former Representative Garrett Bradley I understand the district and how the State House works. In addition, I worked in Governor Deval Patrick's Administration as the Director of Legislative Affairs at the Executive Office of Housing and Economic Development (EOHED). I am the candidate in this race who has worked on behalf of the residents of the district, and have the relationships in place to hit the ground running on day one.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Kristen Arute

Kristen Arute, 49, is a private math tutor and private elder care provider. She lives in Hingham with her husband Michael. They have a daughter Kelsey, 24, and son, Andrew, 19. Kristen holds a BS in Education from Wheelock College and has some MBA coursework at Northeastern University. Arute is a write-in candidate for state representative for the Third Plymouth District in the republican primary.

Civic involvement: The importance of volunteerism is something that was instilled in me by my parents who are still very active volunteers in their community. Has been involved in my children's schools and in church in various capacities. Was room mother at Foster School for several years, helped with the Turkey Trot and sports banquets, and most recently was co-chair of Senior Night for two consecutive years. Taught Sunday school and piñata-making classes at church, and has been actively involved in Vacation Bible School. Started drama program for evening worship service.

What experience has best prepared you to serve as a state representative? Raising my two children; however from a career standpoint it would have to be running my own home-based childcare program for 13 years. I was solely responsible for every aspect of my business. I maintained a budget, managed payables and receivables, established and enforced policy and dealt with the State regulatory agency.

Favorite quote: "Making the decision to have a child — it is momentous. It is to decide forever to have your heart go walking around outside your body." -- Elizabeth Stone

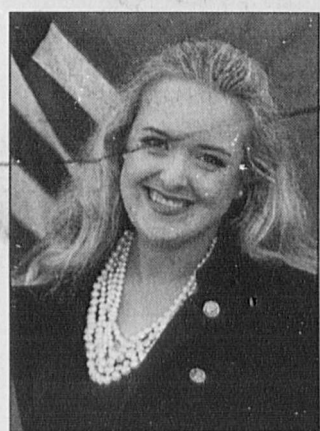

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life? My grandfather was a genuinely compassionate man who loved his family dearly and was always ready to listen. I adored him and miss his gentle spirit.

What would people be surprised to know about you? I have a minor in theater arts and several years ago wrote a Christmas musical for our church.

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8? As a lifelong resident of the South Shore, I am devoted to this community and understand the issues and concerns of residents and the history behind them. My background as an educator, elder advocate, small business owner and active civic participant will be valuable in the Representative role. I believe strongly in the importance of citizen participation in government at all levels and know my skills and experience will benefit the district. As a citizen with no ties to special interests, organizations or lobbyists, I would be able to bring a fresh perspective, new energy and a skilled approach to the job.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Keri Thompson

Keri Thompson, 33, is a Cohasset resident and senior lecturer at Emerson College. Thompson is a graduate of Acton-Boxborough Public Schools and holds a BS in Speech Communication from Bradley University. She has graduate degrees from Pepperdine University and The University of Texas at Austin. Thompson is a write-in candidate on the United Independent Party ballot in the primary for state representative for the Third Plymouth District.

Civic involvement: Longtime political activist. Founder of South Shore Progressives. Elected as a DNC delegate for Bernie Sanders. Former Republican. Former Democrat. Ready to "rock the boat" as an independent.

What experience has best prepared you to serve as a state representative? I have been a "political insider" for most of my adult life. I have spent my entire life fighting for a two-party system that is no longer working or serving the people. I'm ready to do things differently and break the mold on Beacon Hill.

Favorite quote: "We are tied to the ocean. And when we go back to the sea, whether it is to sail or to watch - we are going back from whence we came." -- John F. Kennedy

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life? My students. They have taught me that it's OK to be uniquely and authentically myself and still be successful. They have inspired me to be brave and do things differently.

What would people be surprised to know about you? The 4th of July is my favorite holiday but I also love Halloween! I only wear nautically themed Halloween costumes each year: I was a lobster last year and a shark the year before that.

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8? We have reached a breaking point in our community and our country where our two-party system is fundamentally flawed. Most voters do not fall neatly into one partisan category. We can do better. The solution is to start an independent revolution and start bringing sanity back to politics. We have never elected a female independent in the history of the Massachusetts legislature and it's time to rock the boat!

OUR VIEW

Drug patents drive up prices

Hillary Clinton, Donald Trump and three-fourths of their fellow Americans say prescription drugs cost too much. They're right, and the two candidates even agree on a couple of good strategies to try to keep prices down: Allow Medicare to negotiate on behalf of its 40 million beneficiaries, and let Americans buy drugs from countries where quality is well monitored.

Yet neither of these strategies addresses head-on the No. 1 reason that drug spending is rising so much. The main culprit, according to research from Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, is that the government grants extraordinarily long periods of market exclusivity for new drugs.

The Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Patent Office together give new drugs monopoly rights that last anywhere from eight and a half to 15-plus years. This helps explain why brand-name drugs account for 72 percent of drug spending in the U.S. even though they represent only 10 percent of prescriptions. Since 2008, prices for the most commonly used branded drugs have risen 164 percent - far faster than other medical costs. The U.S. spends more than twice what other industrialized countries spend on drugs.

The problem would not be nearly so severe if the drugs' government-granted monopolies were shorter. Once generic versions are allowed to compete, a medicine's price often drops by almost half, sometimes more than 85 percent, if enough competitors jump into the market.

Yet the government tends to do the opposite, the Brigham and Women's researchers found, by extending market exclusivity via additional patents for trivial alterations -- a new coating on a pill, for example. This is nonsensical: Unless a drug is transformed in a way that affects its therapeutic value, it should not qualify for an extended patent.

Drug makers often stretch their own market exclusivity by paying generics companies to delay introducing competitive medicines.

The government, which is protecting these companies' monopoly rights, should demand an end to this tactic. Federal drug regulators should also require that manufacturers disclose the prices they negotiate with their various customers -- including all the rebates and discounts they allow. Not only would this help all private payers negotiate lower prices, it would create a more healthy marketplace.

To have an impact, however, all this information -- about both cost and effectiveness -- needs to be put to good use. In America's disjointed health-care system, too many doctors remain blissfully unaware of what they're asking patients and their insurers to spend, the researchers found. Doctors also need to be aware of lower-cost alternatives -- generics, of course, but also other medicines and therapies that can treat the same symptoms as well or better in other ways. So-called comparative effectiveness studies are needed for all drugs.

Yes, it makes sense to grant a company an exclusive license to sell a new medicine. But it's also important to know exactly how valuable that medicine is.

GROWING ON THE FARM

Produce coming despite drought

The half inch of rain that fell from the sky recently is helpful for the plants, the dry, dry earth and the spirits of the farmers, who have been watering and tending to the scorched plants as best as possible. The farmers are grateful that customers have continued to come to the farmstand, desiring arugula, and instead embracing pea shoots.

Farming is hard work as so stated in the definition of organic farming. It is made even harder when weather and uncontrollable elements stand in the way. The farmers will keep trying to make sure the farmstand, the market and the occasional restaurant provide organic produce. The recent spat of dry weather has tested so many people's patience.

Here in New England, we deal with this drought, while others around us deal with fire and flood. The climate has a propensity to change. I hope many people are changing, changing their attitude toward expecting a green lawn throughout the summer. Let it go. I see lawn signs that promote a variety of candidates this political season and that promote "brown is the new green." It will rain again, the sun will continue to rise and grass is a perennial crop.

As for ongoing annuals, the farmers have an eye toward autumn, as we last week heeled in over 500 broccoli plants. Lettuce seedlings are waiting for their moment to be transferred from their start trays to go into the ground and become beautiful heads of lovely lettuce. The broccoli plants will need time and the calendar will oblige.

Though schoolchildren and teachers are desperately stocking up on ideas, lessons and white-lined paper, the end of summer does not arrive until Sept. 21. This seasonal switch will still allow for sunny days, though shortened, and warm spells so the majestic broccolis can produce their crowns. We need to hold on a bit. The late summer crops will mature. The soil will give nutrients to the plants new and old. The grass will appear greener and we will change with the climate.

Adapt and adjust and keep on carefully growing. See you at the barn these late summer days and again in for autumn greens, as the leaves on the trees turn to bright hues of yellows, orange and golden.

The South Shore Art Center presents an art exhibit by Karen M. Pinard at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library Sept. 6 through Oct. 31. Pinard says "The connection between art and nature has always been inspirational. The color harmony and contrast is glorious. Painting for me is not documenting, but rather capturing a glimpse — an experience that is quickly gone. A lyrical rendering is what I want to create — nature radiates so much more than an exact replication. I hope to capture the essence of the subject with reflective nuances that might evoke a response, or solicit a memory. It remains a challenge to paint images which awaken our emotional selves." LIVING WELL

Pokémon craze gets people up and moving

The recent Pokémon craze has highlighted a rather ironic and sad fact. In spite of the hazards and potential dangers the game poses when players are not paying attention to their "real" environment, at least it is getting people off the couch and outside.

Unfortunately, there's a lot of truth to that.

Too many people, including children, have become far too sedentary. With the technology at our fingertips that can take us virtually anywhere and do virtually anything while we remain seated in our living rooms, our bodies are taking a hit.

Of course, there are valid reasons for many of us to be "sitting" our way through the day – jobs and school to name just two. But when we arrive home, do we plant ourselves in front of the television or curl up with a good book and still not give our legs an opportunity to carry us somewhere?

Several studies have shown there is an increased mortality rate of sedentary lifestyles versus more active. In fact in several international studies, the level of physical inactivity across the world has been dubbed a "global pandemic." But all is not lost. Research has also shown that physical well-being can be restored by integrating physical activity into one's daily lifestyle. In fact, an hour a day can make a noticeable difference. And it doesn't mean having to join a gym or take up a sport. It can be as simple as just getting up and moving. Taking a walk at lunchtime, going out in the morning for a stroll through the neighborhood or walking after dinner.

For those serious about integrating some or more physical activity into one's life, use a fitness tracker to set your own personal benchmarks. Wear it for a week and measure what it's showing for activity. Fitness trackers are typically bracelets, watches, or some clip-on device to measure every movement one takes. And the good news is they're not just for the athletic or exuberantly active, although there have been legitimate concerns when used to the extreme by people with eating or fitness disorders. On average, they've been helpful in getting people to be more conscious of their physical activity. Have they encouraged people to move more? Perhaps. Certainly studies have already seen a noticeable increase with the Pokémon app. And obviously one can assume that anyone volunteering to wear a fitness tracker is interested in increasing activity.

The question remains: how much exercise do we need to do and how often? Daily? Are weekends only good enough? Most of the researchers concur that while we know that exercise saves lives, we don't know what the best "dose" is. So while the jury is out deciding how much and how often, don't just sit there – get up and move. Every step matters.

And if you're out looking for Pokémon, exercise your common sense and be sure to play sensibly!

COHASSET 250TH

Town planning birthday celebration

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

As supported by Town Meeting voters in May, selectmen have begun appointing members to the 250th Anniversary Steering Committee, which will oversee planning of the festivities celebrating Cohasset's 250th birthday in 2020.

The board unanimously appointed five steering committee members on August 23. Eventually, said Town Manager Chris Senior, the core committee should comprise around 15 people, with a couple hundred auxiliary members and volunteers filling different roles along the way.

Merle Brown, Judith Kasameyer, and Glenn Pratt have so far been appointed to the committee.

Brown formerly was a long-time member of Board of Selectmen and helped form the South Shore Recycling Cooperative. He currently volunteers with the local cable access channel, 143tv.

Kasameyer has served as treasurer on the South Shore Art Center's board of directors. By profession, she is a project manager with expertise in finance and strategic planning.

Pratt has served on so many committees that it would take up less space to list the ones he hasn't been on. Presently, he is a member of the Social Service League, Veterans Memorial Committee, the Cohasset Central Cemetery Board of Directors, and the Old Colony Council Boy Scouts of America executive board.

The 250th Anniversary Steering Committee aims to commemorate the town's history, celebrate what's happening in the community today, and contribute to the future by encouraging donations to make a lasting difference beyond the 250th milestone.

Some ideas for celebrating the 250th are updating the heritage trail to include more recent houses (it currently stops somewhere in the 19th century) and unearthing an old time capsule to replace it with a new one.

The planning process is still in the early stages, however, and more voices are needed on the steering committee. To apply, visit CohassetMA.org and fill out the committee application form available from the homepage.

NATURE (HUMAN AND OTHERWISE)

Celebrating a century of our National Parks

KEZIA BACON

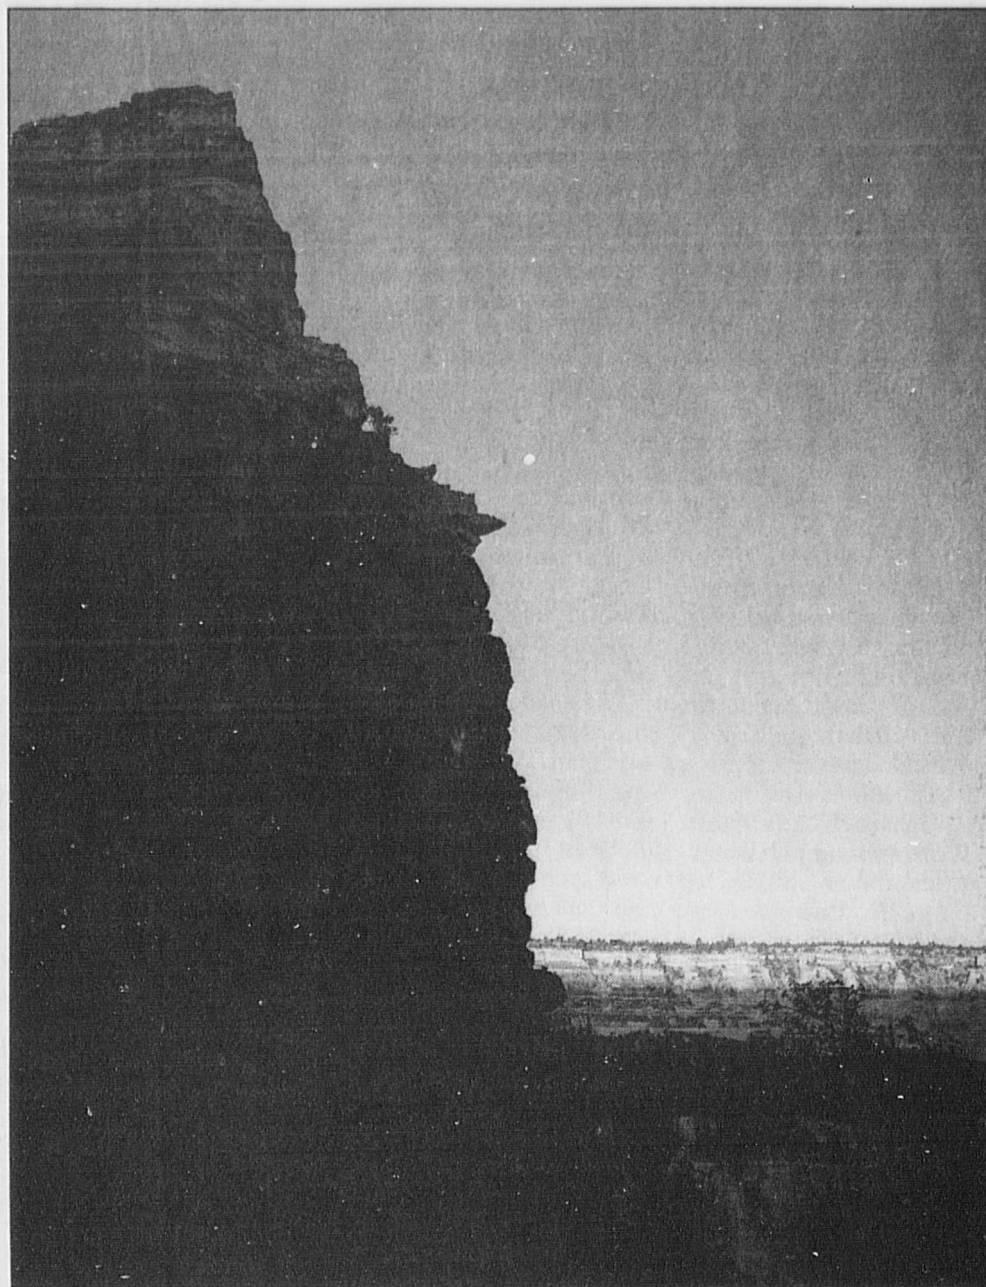

This summer the National Park Service of the United States celebrated its 100th birthday. A century ago, on Aug. 25, 1916, President Woodrow Wilson signed the act that created a federal bureau within the Department of the Interior to oversee the country's already-existing 35 national parks and monuments, as well as any additional going forward. One hundred years later, that number has grown to 413. This includes national parks and monuments, as well as properties with a variety of other "national" classifications, such as battlefields, historic sites, rivers and seashores. To mark the centennial, this year on Aug. 25, President Obama designated 87,500 acres in Maine as the Katahdin Woods and Waters National Monument.

Four-hundred-thirteen isn't a huge number. It's entirely possible that a person could visit every single one of our national park properties in a lifetime. (Ambitious, but still possible.) While I doubt I'll make it to all 413 (or more, as there's a good chance the number will continue to rise) it's fun to contemplate which parks I might like to see next, and why.

Why do we have national parks? They preserve wild and natural places, not only for posterity, but also as a source of national pride. The first national park in the United States – possibly the first one on the planet as well – was Yellowstone, designated in 1872 by President Ulysses S. Grant. While Grant was the first president to create a federally-owned park, Theodore Roosevelt is generally known as the "conservation president." Roosevelt doubled the number of national parks while he was in office. Perhaps more importantly, he oversaw the passing of The Antiquities Act, which gave the president unilateral power to designate national monuments as well. Creating a national park requires an act of Congress, so the passage of The Antiquities Act opened the door to significantly greater conservation efforts nationwide.

Our national parks are truly a treasure, and I encourage you to check some of them out! Here's a series of questions to get you thinking along those lines . . . along with my own answers.

1. Have you ever visited a US National Park? Do you have a favorite? I've been fortunate to visit a lot of them. My favorite might be Acadia, in Bar Harbor Maine, where I climbed Cadillac Mountain and rode trail bikes with my son last summer. Or maybe it's Yellowstone, in Wyoming, because the park itself is so varied – mountains, lakes, waterfalls, geysers, mineral pools, bison roaming everywhere! Or possibly Canyonlands in Utah, even though – thanks to a 5-day whitewater rafting trip in 1993 – it's also the setting of one of my recurring nightmares.

2. What was the first national park you visited?

Mine was either the Cape Cod National Seashore or the White House, both before age ten, but the one that made the biggest impression on me, and got me paying attention to the National Parks System at an early age, was The Grand Canyon, which I traveled to with my family when I was twelve. (And again with a friend on a cross-country road trip at age twenty. . . And on another cross-country trip at 29. . . And again at 44.) Each visit revealed different aspects of the park, the canyon, the Colorado River . . . as well as varying insights into our national character.

3. Can you name the 19 National Parks, National Historic Sites, National Seashores, and other NPS properties in Massachusetts?

Off the top of my head, I cannot! But here's a list. National Historic Parks: Adams, Boston, Lowell, Minute Man, and New Bedford Whaling. National Historic Sites: Boston African American, John F. Kennedy, Longfellow House/Washington's Headquarters, Frederick Law Olmsted, Salem Maritime, Saugus Iron Works, and Springfield Armory. National Scenic Trail: Appalachian Trail. National Heritage Corridor: Blackstone River Valley, Quinebaug and Shetucket Rivers Valley. National Recreation Area: Boston Harbor Islands. National Seashore: Cape Cod. National Heritage Area: Essex. Wild and Scenic River: Westfield River. This list alone could keep an eager traveler busy for quite some time!

It is worth noting that in 1977 our very own North and South Rivers were designated a National Natural Landmark by the Department of the Interior, "possessing national significance in illustrating the natural character of the United States." The National Park Service oversees the National Natural Landmark (NNL) program. While an NNL designation doesn't confer park status on the river and its watershed, the recognition still significant. There are eleven NNLs in Massachusetts, and close to 600 nationwide.

4. Which national park would you like to visit next? With a ten-year-old, I'm in "revisiting" mode – going back to places I've already seen, in order to offer my son some different perspectives on the landscape and on our country in general. We toured 11 national parks, monuments, and historic sites in Arizona this summer, along with a handful of Navajo tribal parks. Southern Utah is next on the family list – Arches, Bryce, Zion, Capitol Reef, etc. – but the historic sites and memorials of Washington DC rate pretty highly as well.

5. What are the Top Five national parks you're hoping to see in your lifetime? There are a bunch of parks and monuments in Alaska and Hawaii . . . sigh! Maybe someday! Glacier National Park in Montana; Voyageurs in Minnesota; Joshua Tree and Death Valley in California. And if I ever get to the point where giant reptiles don't make me squeamish, an airboat tour of the Everglades in Florida would definitely appeal.

PUSHING THE EDGE

Dear Mother Nature: Send rain, please!

Dear Ms. Nature, I am writing on behalf of the residents of Hingham (and all of Eastern Massachusetts) requesting that you provide us with some rain soon. You may remember several years ago I wrote to you during the winter of 2015 saying "enough is enough" with the snow. Well, you may have overdone the lack of moisture thing. You see we have discovered that "brown is the new green". Our lawns are scorched, our flowers are wilting and our gardens are a bust.

We are conserving water as part of the imposed outdoor watering ban because 23 percent of the water consumed in Hingham is for outdoor use. I've heard that if we don't get rain soon we may have to bathe on odd/even days and maybe even restrict flushing. Please this is Massachusetts and not California!

Can't you send some of the rain from Louisiana up to us? Don't get me wrong, I'm not asking for a hurricane – just a few days of continued light rain. Don't wait until the winter to compensate. We are still recovering from the ice dams of 2015.

I've heard that if we don't get rain soon we may have to bathe on odd/even days and maybe even restrict flushing. Please this is Massachusetts and not California!

I read that about 70 percent of the earth's surface is water-covered, but fresh water is only 3 percent of all Earth's water. All that ocean water is not going to directly turn the brown lawns green. Most of us believe that global warming is real. Sorry about our carelessness. Of course all the hot air from the presidential campaigns hasn't helped. We may live in the "land of the free and home of the brave" but our fate is in your hands, Mother Nature. Give us a break and send rain soon.

Respectfully,

The chandlery was opened as a museum in 1960 and for the past 56 years has been presenting artifacts dedicated to Cohasset's long history as a maritime community.

Raven has a big heart and a lot of love to give a forever family. Please stop by and meet her! COURTESY PHOTO/RICH MCSWENEY

Raven is ready to adopt a family

Hi there. I'm a 1-1/2 year old pit bull terrier named Raven. I may be young, but I actually came to the Shelter with five puppies because my family just didn't want me anymore — no time. I was an excellent mom, if I do say so myself, and all of my kids found homes quickly. Now it is my turn!

I was really a handful in the beginning because I was very protective of my family — and I'm still wary with strangers. But the people at the Shelter can't believe how well I've turned around and how quickly I learn things. In fact, they tell me I'm extremely smart — I've learned to sit and lie down and give a paw on command. And I'm really well housetrained.

I love to go for walks (OK maybe a little too much — I pull a lot and I am pretty strong!).

The downside? I don't do kids or cats and I know I face an uphill battle because honestly, people are really scared of pit bulls. But any dog expert could tell you that we are just like other dogs our size. Really. Would you give me a chance?

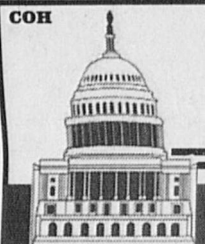

Interested? Email at Ashley at: ashleydavis@scituateanimalshelter.org or call 781-544-4533.

Squeaky toys are sort of a hobby, and I'm a great ball fetcher. I really enjoy agility training — not to brag, but I'm super good at it.

Patrick O'Connor
(R-Weymouth)

Room 479

THE HOUSE AND SENATE: Beacon Hill Roll Call records local senators' and representatives' votes on roll calls from late July sessions. All of the roll calls are from both branches' overrides of some of Gov. Charlie Baker's 256 vetoes of spending and other items in the recently signed $38.92 billion fiscal 2017 state budget. A two-thirds vote in both branches is needed in order for a veto to be overridden.

In his veto message, Baker cites the state's projected shortfall of $650 million to $950 million in the fiscal 2017 budget that the Legislature sent him. He said the vetoes are necessary to help close that gap.

He also gave a reason for reducing funding for each item that he vetoed. The reasons, however, as has been the case with governors of both parties in recent times, are vague and general. He used three phrases to explain many of his vetoes. "I am reducing this item to the amount projected to be necessary." "I am vetoing this item because it is not consistent with my House 2 [original budget] recommendation." And "I am striking language which earmarks funding for a program not recommended."

Democratic legislative leaders disagree with Baker and say that all 256 of his vetoes could be overridden without pushing the state budget out of balance. They say that Baker's cuts would have affected many important programs and hurt many people including minorities, women, seniors and children.

REDUCE GOVERNOR'S BUDGET BY $53,044 (H 4450)

House 95-59, first sustained and then 105-49, overrode Governor Baker's veto of $53,044 (from $5,304,390 to $5,251,346) in funding for the offices of Gov. Baker, Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito and the Governor's Council. This was the only budget veto that the House actually sustained, only to reconsider and then override it. The Senate overrode the veto 25-13.

(A "Yes" vote is for spending the $53,044. A "No" vote is against spending it. One roll call is recorded for senators and both roll calls are recorded for representatives.)

ALSO UP ON BEACON HILL

STUDY OCEAN ACIDIFICATION (H 4593) - The House approved and sent to the Senate a bill creating a special commission to analyze existing scientific literature and data on ocean acidification. The study would focus on how it has affected or potentially will affect commercially harvested and grown species along the Massachusetts coast, and how to mitigate it. Ocean acidification occurs when carbon dioxide (CO2) is absorbed by seawater, reducing the amount of pH in the water.

National Geographic Magazine explains, "Since the beginning of the industrial revolution in the early 1800s, fossil fuel-powered machines have driven an unprecedented burst of human industry and advancement. The unfortunate consequence, however, has been the emission of billions of tons of carbon dioxide and other greenhouse gases into Earth's atmosphere."

The magazine notes that half of this man-made CO2 has been absorbed over time by the oceans. While this has benefited Earth by slowing the climate change these emissions would have caused if they had remained in the air, there is also a downside. Research is discovering that the massive amounts of CO2 are altering water chemistry and affecting the life cycles of many marine organisms.

PREVENT ANIMAL SUFFERING AND DEATH (S 2369) - Gov. Baker signed into law a bill that would prohibit persons from leaving their pet in a car when high or low temperatures could endanger the animal's health and safety. Violators would be hit with up to a $150 fine for a first offense, $300 for a second offense and $500 for any subsequent offense.

Another key provision allows law enforcement officers and everyday citizens, after making reasonable efforts to locate the motor vehicle's owner, to enter a vehicle by any reasonable means to protect the health and safety of an animal. It also makes them immune from criminal or civil liability that might result from the removal.

Other provisions prohibit leaving a dog outdoors during harsh weather conditions and prohibit a dog from being chained or tethered outside for more than five hours per day or between 10 p.m. and 6 a.m. for more than 15 minutes. Violations under the tethering law include penalties of up to $500 or relinquishment of ownership of the dog.

During the week of August 22-26, the House met for a total of 53 minutes while the Senate met for a total of 36 minutes.

DEFINITIONS

Back-to-school study guide for parents

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Everyone knows what "the ABCs" stands for, but not everyone recognizes these other acronyms that get thrown around in the educational community. School administrators shared the most common phrases and acronyms that seem to trip parents up. You may want to keep this study guide on hand...

Acronyms:

CEF: Cohasset Education Foundation

This community organization aims to ensure that Cohasset students, teachers and administrators have access to the programs, materials and up-to-date equipment necessary to maintain a level of academic excellence in today's competitive environment.

The CEF raises funds throughout the year through contributions from residents, businesses and corporate and private enterprises. The group maintains a close partnership with the school administration and evaluates for funding those needs submitted by teachers and administrations.

DESE: Department of Elementary and Secondary Education

DESE is the state education agency for the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, responsible for public education at the primary and secondary levels. When district leaders talk about "Dessie," this is what they mean.

DESE aims to strengthen curriculum, instruction, and assessment, improve educator effectiveness, turn around the lowest performing districts and schools, use data and technology to support student performance, and support the social, emotional, and health needs of students and families.

DLC: Digital Learning Committee

This group of volunteers has worked hard to develop a five-year digital learning plan for Cohasset schools and to secure the necessary approvals and funds to bring that plan to fruition.

Phase one of the learning plan is now rolling out to students at the elementary level. When your student comes home raving about the robot she programmed or the essay he blogged from a classroom Chromebook, this is the team to thank!

IEP: Individualized Education Program

This document, developed for each public school child who is eligible for special education, defines the individualized objectives of a child who has been found with a disability. The IEP is intended to help children reach educational goals more easily than they otherwise would.

The IEP describes how the student learns, how the student best demonstrates that learning, and what teachers and service providers will do to help the student learn more effectively.

IPDP: Individual Professional Development Plan

All certified teachers are required to complete this worksheet by the Massachusetts Department of Education, outlining their professional growth goals and plans for achieving them. Teachers must complete goals and activities to maintain their teaching license.

MTSS: Multi-Tiered System of Supports (also TST: Tiered Support Time)

Massachusetts has developed a blueprint outlining a single system of supports that is responsive to the academic and non-academic needs of all students, including students with disabilities, English language learners, and students who are academically advanced.

Schools and districts are encouraged to work toward an integrated approach to support students' academic and social-emotional competencies. TST blocks are offered in the middle-high school schedules to allow students time to work on individualized needs.

PBIS: Positive Behavioral Interventions & Supports

This is a proactive approach to establishing the behavioral supports and social culture needed for all students in a school to achieve social, emotional and academic success. PBIS was implemented at Deer Hill and Osgood Schools last year.

PBIS aims to establish systems of support at the school-wide, classroom, and individual levels that improve lifestyle results for all youth by making targeted misbehavior less effective, efficient, and relevant, and desired behavior more functional.

SEPAC: Special Education Parent Advisory Council

SEPAC members advise

the school committee on matters that pertain to the education and safety of students with disabilities and meet regularly with school officials to participate in the planning, development, and evaluation of the school committee's special education programs.

The organization also provides resources for parents, including sharing new research articles and scheduling speakers to present in Cohasset.

UDL: Universal Design for Learning

UDL is a set of principles for curriculum development that gives all individuals equal opportunities to learn. It provides a blueprint for creating instructional goals, methods, materials, and assessments that work for everyone instead of a single, one-size-fits-all solution.

Individuals bring a huge variety of skills, needs, and interests to learning. The goal of education in the 21st century is not simply the mastery of content knowledge or use of new technologies. It is the mastery of the learning process for all learners from the start.

Words:

Adjustment counselor: Someone who works with students that require a specific type of emotional support during the school day, and/or who often helps students to develop skill-based strategies for processing of information. This is not the same as a guidance counselor!

Blended Learning: A combination of classroom instruction with on-line research activity.

Executive Function: The combination of cognitive skills that allows a person to plan, prioritize, shift mental set, organize, use working memory, self-monitor, and self-check.

Guidance counselor: Responsible for scheduling of students, advising students on course selection, meeting with parents and students to discuss student progress, and helping high school students plan for college and career. Each Cohasset school has its own guidance counselor.

Professional Learning Community: Teachers coming together to study a topic in order to strengthen their own professional knowledge and improve practice.

Project-based learning: An approach to learning and assessment that allows students to explore a topic and develop a representation of their learning over time. This approach can often be a more authentic because it is not a "snapshot" of learning or a one-time-only test. It allows students to spend a significant amount of time to research and explore a subject or area of interest.

Rotation: At the middle-high school, the order in which the days and class periods rotate.

Student-centered learning: Instruction that puts the focus on students and not on the teacher, meaning that students generate the work, model thinking for their classmates, and work together to solve problems. This is a departure from the traditional lecture method.

Social-emotional learning: Development of skills and strategies to process emotions as students deal with school-age issues such as setting goals, building personal relationships, and developing a sense of identity and personal responsibility.

Standards-based: Emphasizing what students learn over what they do. Lessons focus on standards of learning rather than activity, and assessments reflect what students have learned rather than what they have done.

Student Growth Percentile (SGP): Describes a student's growth (according to statewide assessments) when compared to other students with similar prior test scores. Since third grade scores are the baseline scores, SGP begins to be measured in the fourth grade.

Syllabus: A detailed list of assignments and due dates that allows students to plan long-range assignments and strengthen time management skills.

Utility (or TST): A dedicated time period for middle-high school students to seek extra help from teachers or to work collaboratively with other students. Middle school students have a 25 minute utility/TST period every day; high school students have it every Thursday for 55 minutes.

Weekly forecast: a snapshot of learning objectives and homework assignments for the week ahead.

Balance critical for CHS athletes

By Amanda C. Thompson
athompson@wickedlocal.com

Orchestrating the high school athletics program is a game of strategy, requiring chess-like finesse.

Statistically speaking, if you have a kid at Cohasset High School, he or she probably plays a sport. In fact, he or she probably plays more than one. Multi-sport athletes are mathematically required if 430 students are going to participate in sports over 700 times in any given year.

That's a good thing, according to Athletic Director Ron Ford.

"You should play more than one sport," said Ford. "You don't do 'leg day' every day, and that's not what colleges want anymore, either; they want kids who are well-rounded and take a break from their sport. If you do it 12 months a year, at some point you're going to burn out or get injured."

Of course, in Cohasset, athletes aren't just athletes. They're also artists and actors, musicians and mathletes, debaters and delegates at Model UN.

"In a bigger school, kids would have to choose: athletics or drama," said Ford. "Our kids are multiple activity kids. One of my goals this year and every year is making sure that kids can be involved in the arts and other programs. That means we can't have a field hockey game at same time as football, or we wouldn't have a pep band."

Cohasset athletes definitely take advantage of the many opportunities available to them. Both the kids and the programs are maxed out, said Ford. But it's a fragile balance.

"We're still small," Ford said. "We have a number of co-op teams, and we don't have to cut people. But at a bigger school, participation drops and the team just isn't successful; here, if participation drops, we lose the program."

So far, the athletics department has kept it all in balance. Ford recently reported to the School Committee that the past year's expenses and participation rates matched neatly with projections, and the department is on track for another great year with even better coordination with other programs.

"We ran the bottom line we said we were going to run," Ford said. "The report is a good tool for looking back on what we've done and project for upcoming years. Participation rates are great. It's a big part of the school's culture, and there are very few sports we don't have at this point."

Other goals for the coming year include collaborating with the Town to improve the tennis courts and Milliken Field facilities, and increasing planning and scheduling around arts and other extracurricular clubs.

New and returning teachers gathered for opening day on August 31 to go over the technology plan that's rolling out in the new school year and learn how that fits into the district's overarching goals outlined in the strategic plan.

Interim Superintendent Louise Demas addressed the faculty on opening day, reminding them of their mission and objectives.

Lining up

Football team set to build all new line

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

The Cohasset football team has some work to do as it heads into the new season.

While the Skippers have experience at the skill positions, the same can't be said for the line, where coach Pete Afanasiw and his staff are looking at replacing the entire offensive line.

"Our interior line is inexperienced," Afanasiw said. "We are focused on teaching. This is the first time in a long time where we have to replace the entire offensive line. The past several years we've only had to replace one or two, maybe three at a time."

The big trick is getting the new linemen on the same page quickly.

"We only run six plays," Afanasiw said. "The same plays we've done for 10 years. Guys have to get comfortable with assignments and that leads to improved execution."

At the moment, there are a number of players fighting for starting positions on the lines.

"We have two sophomores and three or four juniors fighting it out for the starting spots," Afanasiw said. "When we figure it out, the others are going to be critical backups."

As usual, Afanasiw works hard to build depth and unlike a number of teams, the Skippers try to avoid having players

The Cohasset field hockey team had one of its best seasons ever last year with a 15-0-3 regular season and a trip to the MIAA Division 2 South Sectional Final, where they were edged by Hanover by the smallest of margins.

The Skippers have a number of returning players this year, but also a number of stars to replace after graduation.

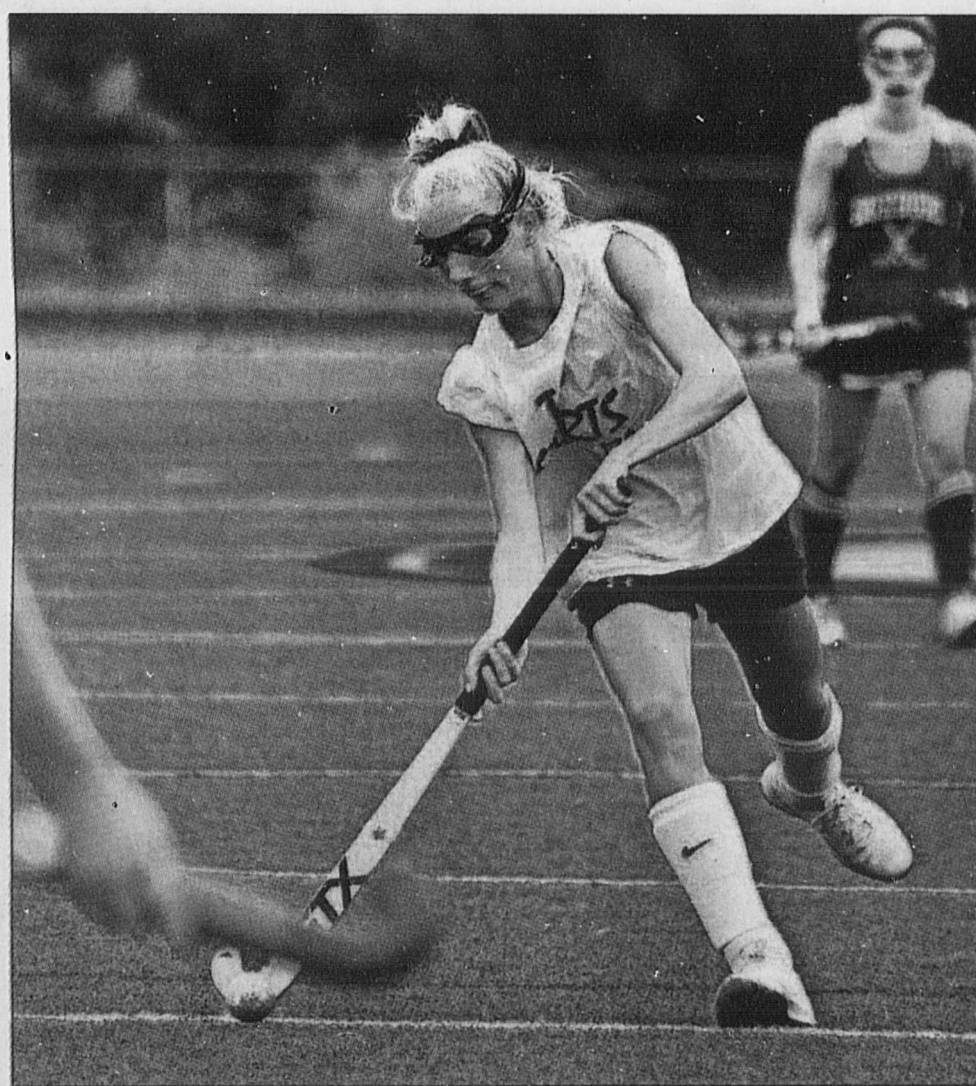

Coach Laura Giuliano said it was still too early to be making predictions about the season.

Shane and Chris Haggerty play catch at Mass. Maritime Academy

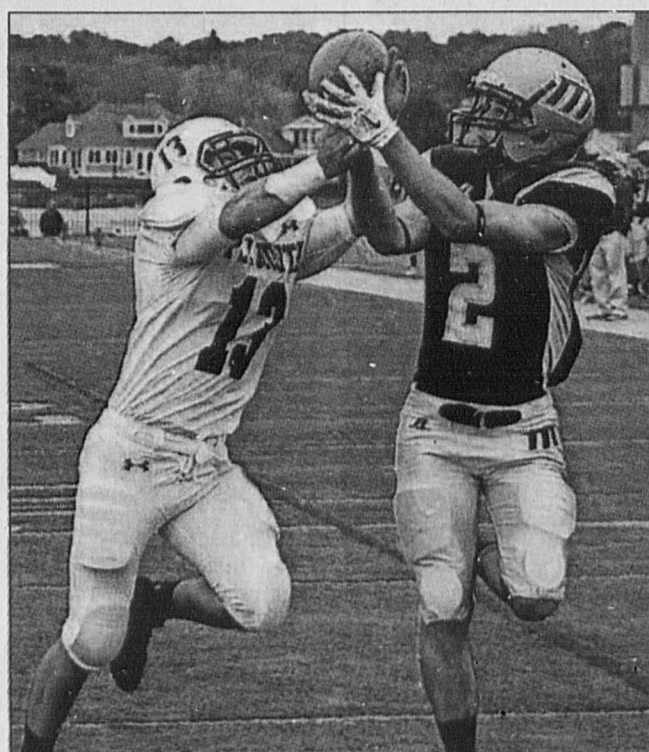

By William Wassersug
wwassersug@wickedlocal.com

Having brothers playing on the same team is a pretty common occurrence in the sports world, in fact it happens all the time, at least at the high school level.

Right here in Cohasset, there are six sets of brothers playing on the football team right now.

Heading up the sports ladder, the numbers drop dramatically, starting in college.

With that in mind, when brothers are able to play together it can be a special thing.

In football, having a set of brothers playing quarterback and receiver is one of those special things.

For Cohasset's Shane Haggerty and Chris Haggerty, the upcoming football season will be a special one.

Shane is a star senior receiver at Mass. Maritime Academy in Buzzards Bay, and his younger brother Chris is a junior who was named the starting quarterback for the new campaign.

This will be the first time the two players are able to get playing time together since they had one season at Cohasset in 2012.

Shane is coming off a fantastic season where he had 41 catches for 666 yards and 6 touchdowns from quarterback Brad

MIAA, Twellman team up for concussion awareness

By Brad Joyal
 Correspondent

For years, nobody wanted to talk about them.

Although concussions have always been a part of sports, they weren't at the forefront of sports injury discussions until recently. Now, the Massachusetts Interscholastic Athletic Association is doing all it can to ensure student-athletes across the state will have the education in order to address the harmful brain injuries which can have long-lasting consequences.

On Thursday afternoon, Aug. 25, the MIAA held a press conference at its headquarters and go both ways, especially on the lines.

"A handful of kids have played both ways the past couple of years," Afanasiv said. "We try to have nobody play all three phases. We're building depth, keeping players fresh and it helps avoid injuries."

While the line is new, a number of skill players have experience, starting with quarterback Xander Schubert, who picked up valuable experience last year when starter Danny Axelson went out with an injury.

Other returning skill players include Connor Curran, Noah Froio, Will Thomas and Thomas Durkin.

Schubert, Durkin and Curran are the captains for the 2016 campaign.

Cohasset starts the season Friday Sept. 9 at 7 p.m. against Rockland, and has a scrimmage against South Shore Voke, Sept. 2.

"Hopefully our two scrimmages will pay dividends," Afanasiv said. "Guys can get some game experience."

Afanasiv is pleased with the way things have been coming along.

"Every day things get better," he said. "We look at film and see good things, and we see things that are fixable. The mistakes we've seen can be fixed with coaching. Nothing we've seen comes from a lack of effort. Guys are working hard. They're coachable and have a good football IQ. The mistakes are fixable and guys have taken constructive criticism well."

As a staff, the Skippers prefer teaching and motivation over other methods.

"Our coaches have done a phenomenal job with positive reinforcement," Afanasiv said. "They have also been working hard to find the right people to play the right positions. Kids have been willing to work hard and use constructive criticism to build on. They have a desire to be better. I think we're coming along well. We're a work in progress."

The Skippers will play in Division 4 this season in the new realignment.

"Things are a little different this year," Afanasiv said. "The only way to qualify automatically is to win the league. The rest are power rankings."

The Skippers are joined by Abington, Mashpee, Carver and Hull in the South Shore League Tobin Division.

Skeffington.

Chris will have big shoes to fill as Skeffington piled up nearly 3,000 yards of offense with 31 touchdowns.

He is feeling ready to do it.

"I'm so excited," Chris said. "I haven't really played since my senior year. I am so excited to run this offense. It sounds weird, but its fun to get hit again and tackled. I can't wait."

For both players, this should be a special year.

"I was the leading receiver last year," Shane said. "I want to be the leading receiver this year. When we played in high school together we had a really good season. We have had a strong bond since high school. We both know what the other is going to do. Even mid-route, he'll look over and know where I am and what I am going to do. There's an extra connection."

Shane said his job as a senior receiver is to be a leader.

"It's my job to try and take charge of the receiving corps," he said. "People look to me to fix problems and get things going. Chris is going to be a great leader. He is our field general."

For Shane there is another big motivation to excel.

"On the field this might be the last sport I ever play competitively," he said. "I would love to finish with a league championship and to make the playoffs."

He feels that is within reach.

Mass. Maritime won four games last year, and brings back a wealth of experience.

"I think the defense stepped up and the offense did real well last year,"

Shane said. "We have a high powered offense. We're going to be very uptempo. We have a no-huddle offense and try to run 100 plays a game."

The style of play keeps the team in shape.

"Coach (Jeremy Cameron) keeps us in great shape," he said. "We do a lot of drills to stay in shape. Our job is to tire out defenses. We have a great time."

Shane was a multi-sport star in high school, playing basketball, football and baseball, winning two state championships with the baseball team.

Chris also starred in the same three sports and was a freshman on one of Shane's baseball championship teams.

"Basketball and football are tied for my favorites," Shane said. "But I decided to play football in college. That's my passion."

One thing both players credited for their success was the coaching they got at Cohasset.

"The coaches in high school were great," Shane said. "They really had us prepared for college. I give coach (football and former baseball coach Pete) Afanasiw credit for prepping me for college football, and coach (basketball coach Bo) Ruggiero for setting us up for success."

Afanasiw had nothing but positives about both players.

"They're awesome," he said. "As coaches we talk about them with such admiration and appreciation for them. As players they were always prepared and had a passion. They're also great kids. To see them playing together in college is phenomenal."

When the new college season starts Sept. 9 at Throggs Neck, New York for the Ninth Annual Chowder Bowl at SUNY-Maritime at 7 p.m.

"I have been preparing for this for two years now," Chris said about getting his chance to start. "I have had to learn a whole new offense. We run a wide open offense in the shotgun. In high school I was under center. It is a whole new style of football. I feel confident this year, a lot more than in my freshman year when it was all new to me. New York is going to be really exciting. We were there two years ago on Sept. 11 and it was something to remember. The entire sky was lit up."

Chris agreed with Shane about a special connection between the two.

"It is awesome to get that connection back," he said. "Last year when I played he wasn't in the game. We were never in at the same time. Most plays are designed to read the defense and see who is open. I'm not specifically looking for him, but we have a great connection between us. We work out together all the time. We worked out together all summer."

When he did play a bit last year, Chris hit 8-of-10 passes for 81 yards.

While football is important to both, getting a top-notch education is the first priority.

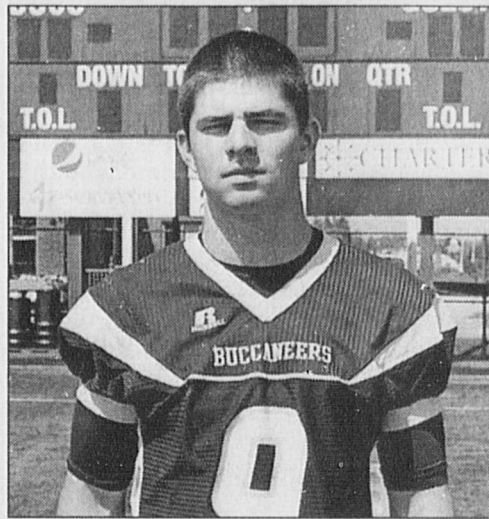

"Mass. Maritime is a small school that nobody knows about," Shane said. "When you graduate they set you up with a job. There's a really high job placement. My major is Facility Engineering. It's mechanical engineering with electrical engineering - engineering for power plants. I love it. I'm excited about graduating."

Chris is taking a different track.

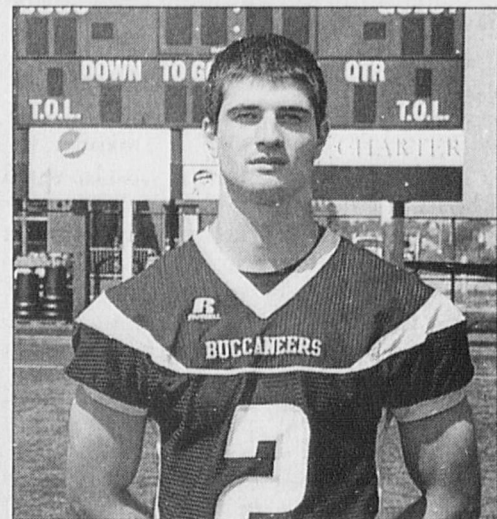

"My brother went there, but I did my research and the school is the best bang for the buck," he said. "This school is a hidden gem. I'm taking International Maritime Business. It's all about the business side of the shipping industry. I won't be on a ship, but will be running the shipping business. It really is fascinating."

While he doesn't plan on working on a ship, he has been given that experience.

"In freshman year we went out to sea for a couple of months," Chris said. "You learn so much. Until you're out there you don't realize how much safety is involved. The shipping industry is so different from anything else."

TAYLOR

announced that it will once again be partnering with former New England Revolution star Taylor Twellman's non-profit organization, ThinkTaylor, for a week-long Concussion Education and Awareness Program beginning Sept. 12.

"This all kind of evolved by education and need," said Twellman, who retired from Major League Soccer after a string of concussions shortened his prolific career with the Revolution. "People are saying that they still want to participate in sports, but they want to play them safely."

Last fall, Twellman - who is now the lead soccer analyst for ESPN - partnered with the MIAA to launch a Concussion Awareness Week that was spearheaded by both boys and girls soccer programs across the state.

Different teams wore orange ThinkTaylor wristbands and bag tags to demonstrate their support, and Groton-Dunstable High went as far to paint its soccer field orange for the week.

"I had never had a concussion before. Of course, I know it's serious but I didn't really ever think about them," said Groton-Dunstable senior soccer player Nikki Eggmann, who attended the press conference. "Ever since ThinkTaylor, my teammates and I now know more about (concussions) and we know that it's something we should be thinking about."

In an effort to enhance their efforts, Twellman and the MIAA are expanding this year's Education and Awareness Week to include every fall sport. From Sept. 12-16, more than 86,000 student athletes will feature ThinkTaylor wristbands and bag tags while discussing the importance of concussions with their individual coaches.

As part of the conversation, coaches will share a speech which was introduced by another advocate for concussion prevention, Christopher Nowinski, who joined Thursday's press conference to discuss Team Up Day, which will be held on Sept. 13 and serve as an additional piece to the week.

Nowinski's passion for concussion research stems from his career as a football player at Harvard and as a wrestler in the World Wrestling Entertainment. He said the most important aspect of the speech that will be read on Team Up Day is the idea that teammates should look out for one another.

"What we've learned from research is that we can teach these athletes the signs and symptoms, but we're struggling to change their behavior," Nowinski said. "We're bringing back an old speech that we found in the diary of the Harvard football coach, Bill Reed, from 1905. He was on top of concussions, and he had the team doctor give a speech in which he said if anybody gets hit in the head, call a timeout and I'll get onto the field."

According to Nowinski, who in 2007 founded the Concussion Legacy Foundation with Dr. Robert Cantu, Reed's message remains relevant 110 years after it was originally delivered.

"We look at that as the first time anybody ever asked someone to look out for their teammate," he said. "It was a message that was lost in history, so we're asking coaches to tell their captains and players to look out for each other."

While Twellman and MIAA Associate Executive Director Richard Pearson went into depth about the long-term impact concussions can have, so too did one of the representatives from Groton-Dunstable.

Dean Tornaritis, a senior who will play his final season for the school's boys soccer team this fall, discussed how suffering a concussion hindered him during the winter.

"I had a concussion at the end of January and I actually missed all of school throughout February," Tornaritis said. "I was out for three or four weeks. It's honestly the worst injury, because if you hurt your ankle you can still hang out with friends or play video games. When you have a concussion, you're just lying in bed and it's torture."

Twellman can relate. He suffered multiple head injuries during his eight-year career with the Revolution. It was his seventh - and final - concussion that sparked the idea of ThinkTaylor.

"On Aug. 30, 2008, my life changed forever," Twellman said, reflecting on the day he suffered his last concussion. "I just realized that as the all-time leading goal scorer in the history of the New England Revolution, I couldn't get the education and the right care. I realized somebody had to have a voice and take charge, and that's all I'm trying to do."

CANDIDATES FOR PLYMOUTH-NORFOLK STATE SENATE SEAT

STATE SENATE RACE

Voter confusion a primary concern

By Alice Coyle
acoyle@wickedlocal.com

There will be four Plymouth and Norfolk state senate candidates' names listed on the Democratic and Republican primary ballots Sept. 8, but only two of them want your vote.

Hull Democrat Joan Meschino changed course in July, deciding to launch a sticker campaign to run for state rep. in the Third Plymouth District — the seat Hingham Democrat Garrett Bradley vacated Aug. 1. While her name will still appear on the Democratic ballot, Meschino doesn't need you to vote for her for senate. But Paul Gannon does.

The Hingham selectman, who lost to Meschino in the April special senate primary election, has very recently decided to get back into the race, but not as a write-in candidate. Instead, Gannon is counting on Meschino to win the primary and decline the nomination, compelling the state Democratic State Committee to form an executive committee to choose the candidate to run in the Nov. 8 general election.

"I'd prefer to be on the ballot," Gannon said. "But these are the cards I've been dealt and I've based my decision on the most efficient use of my resources."

Gannon, who served as a state representative in South Boston in the 1990s, said he believes he's the best candidate and with his late arrival in the contest, this is his best bet at getting the nomination.

But if Brian Cook of Duxbury, the other Democratic candidate whose name appears on the ballot wins the primary, Gannon's gamble won't pay off. And even if Cook comes in second to Meschino in the primary, the Democratic State Committee could still choose him as the candidate or anyone else for that matter.

"It's obviously been a curious process, and this is a curious approach," Cook said of Gannon's campaign strategy. "There have been many twists and turns in this race."

Cook had also been a candidate in the special senate election, but withdrew from that abbreviated race to take more time to campaign and get to know the eight-town district, which includes Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate and Weymouth.

Marshfield attorney Stephen Gill is the other senate candidate who isn't seeking votes Sept. 8. Gill's name will be on the Republican primary ballot, but he wishes it wasn't. In fact, Gill filed an action in federal court last week seeking an injunction so he can unenroll from the Republican Party and be allowed to run in the Nov. 8 general election as an independent candidate.

Gill is making the case that state statutes that set impossible deadlines to unenroll, infringed on his First Amendment right to free association. While he waits to learn of a hearing date, Gill is not campaigning or seeking voter support. If he should win the Republican primary, defeating incumbent Sen. Patrick O'Connor, R-Weymouth, Gill said he'd decline the nomination. He's hoping a favorable and fast decision by the courts will make the primary election results irrelevant and he'll have an opportunity to run as an unenrolled candidate giving voters another choice when they head to the polls Nov. 8.

Into his third month as

Who's on the ballot

Democrat Brian Cook of Duxbury
Democrat Joan Meschino of Hull (a write-in candidate for state representative in the Third Plymouth District)
Republican Patrick O'Connor of Weymouth
Republican Stephen Gill of Marshfield (seeking an injunction to run as unenrolled candidate on Nov. 8 ballot)

Who's really running

Democrat Brian Cook of Duxbury
Democrat Paul Gannon of Hingham
Republican Patrick O'Connor of Weymouth

senator and his second campaign in four months, O'Connor is unfazed by the comings and goings of the other senate candidates and said he remains focused on bringing his message to voters and touting the results he's achieved for the district since his election in May.

"It has been an incredibly confusing election," said O'Connor noting he's been one constant in the race, who is trying to bring some consistency to the campaign and show voters his commitment to the district.

"We're happy with where we are and what we've been able to do so far," O'Connor said. "We're prepared to run a strong campaign to keep the seat."

Education: College of the Holy Cross Bachelors Degree, Boston College Law School Juris Doctor Degree
Hometown: Weymouth
Current Residence: Duxbury
Years in District: 50+

Experience in career or life that has prepared you for serving in the state senate?

I have lived my entire life in this district. I have a deep understanding of this community, its citizens, and their dreams and concerns. My career as a lawyer and a teacher have taught me to work with others, listen to others, negotiate with others, and work to resolve problems. I believe I can be an effective advocate to help the South Shore get its fair share of available public resources. My experience as a husband, homeowner, father, and business owner will allow me to better understand the needs and aspirations of those who I will represent.

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life?

I have benefited from talented and caring teachers, coaches, and mentors throughout my life and in my work. The greatest inspiration in my life are my parents, my in-laws, and my wife; they have all taught me that the most important thing we create and provide for our families and our communities is a secure, comforting environment that builds confidence and love.

What would people be surprised to know about you?

As a person who is very outgoing and very social, I think people would be surprised to know that my favorite place is my own living room surrounded by my family.

Why should people vote for you Sept. 8?

I view the evaluation of candidates as akin to the hiring of a person to run your company or provide you with a valuable service. I hope voters will assess the candidates' backgrounds, education, experiences, judgment, and temperament and choose the person who best reflects his or her values and expectations for the South Shore.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Patrick O'Connor, state senate

Name: Patrick Michael O'Connor
Age: 32
Occupation: Massachusetts State Senator
Family: My father, Michael, my mother, Terry and my sister, Erin. I also have extended family throughout the district.
Education: Weymouth High School graduate. Attended Kingston University in London, England, studying Political Science and Economics.
Hometown: Lifelong Weymouth resident.
Civic involvement: State Senator for the Plymouth and Norfolk district (since May 18), Weymouth Town Council member (11 years), Weymouth Town Council president (3 years), Chairman of the Weymouth Public Safety Committee (8 years), Vice Chairman of the Weymouth Budget Committee, founder of Weymouth's Mental Health & Substance Abuse Committee.

What experience has best prepared you to serve as a state senator?

Since my election, I have jumped in head-first to deliver the district record local aid, funding for projects in each of the eight communities I represent, and handling hundreds of constituents' concerns and opinions. For eight years, I worked as a staff member for former Senator Robert Hedlund helping me gain the experience needed on Beacon Hill to serve as state senator. I have built on my personal and professional relationships with individuals across the district and at the Statehouse to provide the district the representation it deserves.

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life?

My mother is the most selfless woman I know. She has always believed in me and stood by me. For over 40 years she has been helping care for premature babies as a nurse at the neonatal intensive care unit at St. Elizabeth's, and before then St. Margaret's. It takes a special type of person to perform that work. She has taught me so much over the years and I would not be where I am today without her guidance.

What would people be surprised to know about you?

When I was 13 years old, I co-founded L40 Networks, an internet advertising and content promotion company. This venture afforded me the opportunity to attend school in London, England.

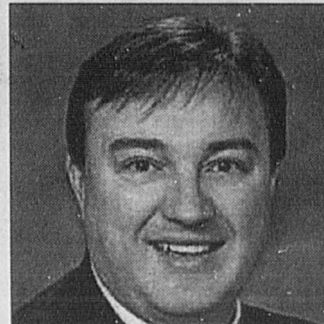

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8?

As a proud member of the South Shore community, I have had the pleasure and privilege of getting to know the wonderful people that live and work here. Serving in both municipal and now in state government for the past 11 years has given me the opportunity to give back to a community that has given me so much. By embracing bipartisanship and focusing on what we all agree on, I intend to grow and secure our economy, increase aid to schools and local services, and help bring an end to this devastating opioid epidemic.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Stephen Gill, state senate

Name: Stephen Gill
Age: 48
Occupation: Attorney / Lt. Commander, Navy Reserve JAG Corps
Family: Two daughters at Marshfield High School Education: Hull High School graduate (1986); UMASS Amherst, B.A., 1990; Loyola Univ. Law School, J.D., 1995.
Hometown: I'm a life-long South Shore resident. My family is from Hingham and I grew up in Hull. I lived in Weymouth for three years, and have lived in Marshfield since 2010.

Civic involvement: I prosecuted terrorists on foreign shores so folks here at home can enjoy their everyday civic activities. I volunteer to perform military funeral honors for our deceased veterans across Massachusetts.

What experience – in your career or life – has best prepared you to serve as a state senator?

As a former Deputy Secretary for the Massachusetts Department of Veterans' Services, I understand the ins and outs of Beacon Hill. As an attorney, I am professionally trained in law crafting. As a veteran, it's instilled in me to get the job done right.

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life?

I owe everything I am to my late parents – my father, Paul J. Gill, a WWII Navy veteran, and my mother, Emily M. Gill, who raised nine great children.

What would people be surprised to know about you?

Throughout the Special Election last spring, I told voters that I will be an independent voice for the South Shore, and will not toe party lines on Beacon Hill. I am putting my money where my mouth is. After discussions all summer long with the Secretary of State and Attorney General's offices, an unfair State political party affiliation statute has forced me to file suit in federal court to leave the Republican Party to run as an independent candidate in the general election Nov. 8.

Why should people vote for you on Sept. 8?

The "best" people that the two-party system has to offer are Donald Trump and Hillary Clinton. There should be another choice. South Shore voters also deserve more choices for state senator. Don't vote for me in the Republican primary on Sept. 8. Vote for me as your independent choice in the general election on Nov. 8.

CANDIDATE PROFILE

Paul Gannon, state senate

Name: Paul J. Gannon
Age: 56
Occupation: Attorney
Family: Married to Susan (Carey) and have two daughters, Jacqueline & Caroline
Education: Don Bosco Technical High School, Providence College, BA, and Catholic University Law School, JD
Hometown: I have lived in Hingham for approximately 9 years
Civic involvement: Organizer of National Ovarian Cancer Coalition 5K Road Race fundraiser, Co-Chairman and founder of Hingham Substance Abuse Prevention Coalition, supporter of the South Shore SNAP program, youth hockey, basketball, soccer and softball coach.

What experience – in your career or life – has best prepared you to serve as a State Senator?

It is my combined experiences that have provided me with the right balance of government, business, and life experiences to serve as our next state senator. Being a homeowner, husband and father, former prosecutor, business owner, and elected official helps me better understand the challenges we all face raising our families today; paying property and business taxes, expensive college tuitions, rising health insurance costs, and providing quality schools for our children. This knowledge will be invaluable when deliberating on legislation that affects our household budgets, our schools, our transportation needs, and our business development.

Who has been the greatest inspiration and influence on your life?

The greatest inspiration and influence in my life are my parents, Paul and Norine Gannon. Their devotion to family, faith and community taught me valuable life lessons.

What would people be surprised to know about you?

"The fact that at 56 years old I can (and do) still play ice hockey twice a week."

Why should people vote for you Sept. 8?

I believe people will vote for me because they know I understand their concerns. They are the same concerns I face every day as a homeowner, husband and father, business owner, and elected official. These life experiences, combined with my public service as a former Prosecutor, State Legislator in South Boston, former member of the Hingham School Committee, and current Hingham Selectman make me the most qualified candidate. I have a proven track record of bringing people together and working hard to solve problems. Whether fighting for working men and women, seniors and veterans as a member of the legislature, forming the Hingham Substance Abuse Prevention Coalition to fight the opioid epidemic, getting involved in youth sports and civic and charitable organizations, or helping friends, family and neighbors in their time of need, no one will work harder at ensuring every town in the district gets the representation and commitment they deserve.

Car fire on S. Main Street

The car fire last week shut down part of South Main Street. COURTESY PHOTOS Flames shoot up from the burning car.

Two-alarm fire on Elm Court

On Monday (Aug. 29) at 6:56 p.m., Engine 2, Engine 3 and Ambulance 2 were dispatched to 50 Elm Court for reported smoke coming from the chimney.

While units were responding to the scene, the dispatch center paged out a box alarm call back for a reported building fire. On arrival of the scene members discovered heavy smoke coming from a split-level single family residence.

Command-1 arrived on scene and established command while members were stretching a hose line into the basement level of the home. Once inside the basement members discovered a moderate fire condition and began an aggressive attack on the fire.

Two off-duty members responded back on the call back and responded to the scene with Ladder 1. The fire had already extended up an interior wall and into the first floor of the residence.

Command then ordered a second alarm for an additional manpower to the scene and a second hose line was stretched into the building. Mutual aid engine companies and chief officers from Scituate, Hingham, and Hull arrived on scene and assisted Cohasset members in performing a primary and second search, and extinguishing the fire of the first floor.

It took approximately 30 minutes to knock down the fire. Units remained on scene for another 90 minutes after the fire was knocked down, overhauling and checking for an further extension of the fire.

The cause of the fire is still undetermined at this time. A trooper from the state fire marshal's office is assisting members of the Cohasset Fire Department with determining the cause of the fire.

No one was home at the time of the fire and no injuries were reported during the fire. An engine company from Norwell Fire covered headquarters while units were tied up at the scene.

POLICE BEAT

Missing person

Two K-9 units, one from Cohasset and one from Scituate, were called to assist in locating a resident of the Harborview Nursing facility off Route 3A near the Hingham line. Staff called police around 7 p.m. on Monday (Aug. 29) about a 71-year-old man with some cognitive issues who had wandered off. A search ensued for more than four hours to no avail. The search was then called off for the night; police noted the weather was mild.

The man, who is from Quincy, was located safe and sound at 8 a.m. the next morning at the Hingham Rotary near the Hingham Maritime Center.

Correction

A police item that appeared in the Mariner last month about a stone birdbath being vandalized on Deep Run sometime overnight (Aug. 13-14) warrants a correction. The damage was not due to weather, as the brief mentioned as a possible cause, but was due to vandalism. If located the suspect would be charged with vandalizing property, according to the police report on the incident. The birdbath was separated in three places and the owners did not know who might have knocked it over. They wanted to make police aware of the damage should other people report similar incidents.

How to dispose of old prescriptions

Unwanted or outdated drugs can become the target of theft and misuse, especially by teenagers. To avoid theft and misuse, the Cohasset Police Department has a program designed to significantly reduce the prescription drugs in Cohasset homes that are either no longer needed or outdated.

America's 12 to 17 year olds have made prescription drugs the number one substance of abuse for their age group, and much of that supply is unwittingly coming from the medicine cabinets of their parents, grandparents, and friends.

Law enforcement is the only entity legally able to accept these medications and process them properly so that they do not fall into the wrong hands. Law enforcement takes control of and destroys drugs on a regular basis as part of their regular operations.

Please join police in this effort by recognizing the need to remove unwanted or outdated drugs from your home. You can participate by anonymously depositing these unwanted or outdated drugs in the police department's drug disposal kiosk, available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, located inside the police station lobby off Elm Street.

Note: Needles are not accepted. Liquids are accepted but should be tightly closed and then sealed inside a plastic bag.

Gov. Baker coming to Cohasset

The Cohasset Republican Town Committee will hold its annual picnic on Sunday Sept. 11th from 3:30 to 6:30 p.m. at the Cohasset Sailing Club. Governor Charlie Baker will headline the event that will feature many candidates and fellow Republicans from Cohasset and towns throughout the South Shore.

Jack Creighton, Chairman of the Cohasset GOP Committee, said "The Cohasset GOP picnic is always a big event but this year's event will be extra special as it falls on the fifteenth anniversary of 9/11 and Governor Baker will be here to help us celebrate and commemorate."

Committee member Andrea Martone shared with us the theme for this year's picnic, "Because the date is three days after the State primary elections and is the anniversary of such a solemn day, the theme will be 'Unity and Remembrance.'"

Peter Buckley from Cohasset and the Republican State Committeeman in the district said, "Each year this Cohasset GOP picnic is one of the landmark events of the GOP 8." The GOP 8 is a consortium of the 8 Republican Town Committees (Cohasset, Duxbury, Hingham, Hull, Marshfield, Norwell, Scituate, and Weymouth) in the Plymouth/Norfolk district.

Event committee members Adele Janssens and Kevin O'Donnell both agreed that the venue is spectacular and the picnic is a lot of fun and a wonderful time of to be with fellow Republicans.

"I lost 120 lbs and 22% body fat!"

"It's not a diet, it really is a transformation program. I have successfully conquered my addiction to food and now eat a healthy lifestyle. I eat to live rather than live to eat. The most rewarding accomplishment is that I am now a positive role model for my son and family. What more can you give to your children by encouraging living a healthy lifestyle from eating to working out. These are the philosophies that I am most proud of."

FAITH

Church School at St. Stephen's: A Place of Wonder

Are you seeking a meaningful church school or spiritual education for your child? Do you want more than paper plate cut out Jesus' or memorized responses? How do you want your child equipped to navigate this fast-paced, multi-tasking, difficult world?

At St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Cohasset, we offer a Christian education program that is more than 'Sunday School.' It is called Godly Play. Based on Montessori principles and theological research, Godly Play has been part of the cultural fabric of St. Stephens' for 18 years. It is a way of being with one another, learning God's stories and making meaning. We invite you to join us.

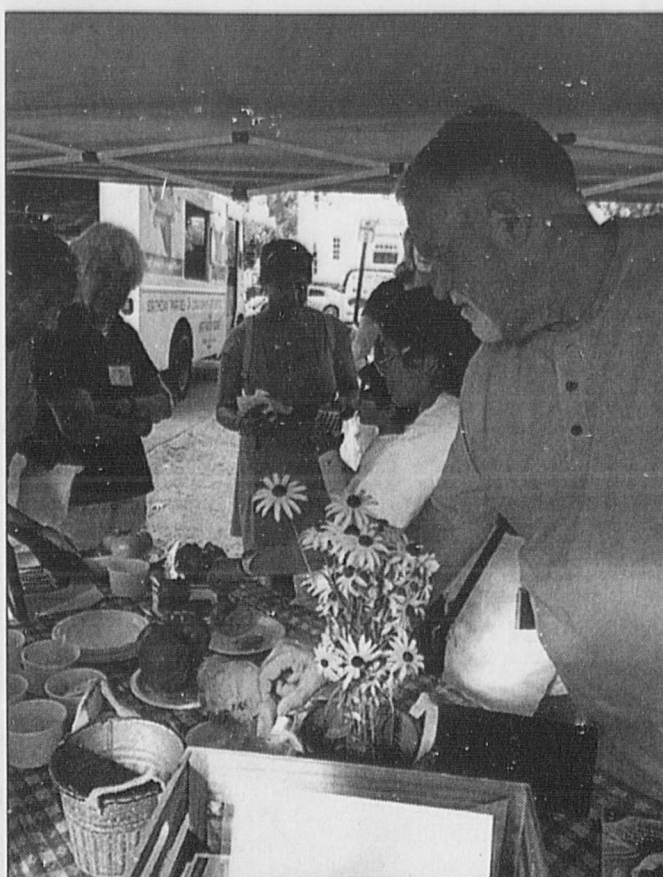

In Godly Play we believe the child innately knows their God and our role is to tell the stories of our faith, guiding the child to wonder about and make meaning. We invite the child to find their own relationship with their God, to be able to connect to that small voice inside and to bring that connection to those hard things in life we face such as aloneness, freedom (too much, too little), death, and those very hard questions of "Who am I and what does it all mean?" We do this in a counter cultural way, with simple language, with beautiful sacred spaces and materials and with the opportunity to contemplate in silence.

Why do we call it Godly Play? When the children enter the space, created just for them, surrounded by Christian history in the stories and materials, they can touch and play with anything. It is their space. With a unique mix of structure and freedom, the creative process is given an opportunity to thrive through a Godly Play session. Children are invited to cross a threshold into their classroom, to sit in a circle, hear a story and wonder together about it: There is no right answer, there is no wrong answer. After the story and wondering are done, children have a time to respond to what they heard, to work with it, to play. We then return to our circle, share a small feast and talk together before joining their families in church for communion.

We would love to see you. Please come and join our circle. We kick off on Sept. 11 at 10 a.m.. Registration begins at 9:30.

DON'T MISS THIS

Don't miss Tolman 'End of Summer Bash'!

By Carol Britton Meyer
cmeyer@wickedlocal.com

There have been changes in the annual Tolman Muscular Dystrophy Association Telethon Party over the years, but the purpose remains the same – to raise funds and awareness to help fight muscular dystrophy and related life-threatening diseases.

The telethon party was inspired by the long-running Jerry Lewis Telethon, which is now past history.

This year's 40th anniversary event, dubbed the "End of Summer Bash," will take place Labor Day Weekend, Sept. 4 and 5, at Congregation Sha'aray Shalom, 1112 Main St. in Hingham. The Tolman family lives in Cohasset.

The entire Hingham community and residents from surrounding towns and beyond are invited to participate.

"As Labor Day rapidly approaches and we get ready for the upcoming telethon party, there are many wonderful memories of my amazing family and friends who join our efforts every year," Jay Tolman said.

Looking back, the event started out in his mother, Izzy's, backyard on Pleasant Street in Hingham as a 24-hour party under a tent to help raise money for MDA.

The telethon party has become a family and community tradition over the years in Hingham, the entire South Shore, and beyond. The fundraising party expanded from the backyard tent to the Hingham Community Center in 1988 and then to Congregation Sha'aray Shalom in 2011.

This year's goal

The event has raised nearly $600,000 for local MDA services and programs over the past 39 years. This year's goal is $20,000.

Those interested in supporting this cause are invited to stop by Sunday, Sept. 4, from 7 to 11 p.m. and Labor Day, Sept. 5, 11 a.m. to 5 p.m., for lots of fun, music, activities for kids, a silent auction, raffles, refreshments, and more.

Tolman attributes the event's ongoing success to the efforts of his family – including his wife, Jodi; daughter, Chloe; sons Jack and Charlie; his sister, Ellen; and his 95-year-old father, John -- friends, and others who support the cause, including many Hinghamites.

"It's amazing to see the community that has formed around the MDA telethon -- we call them our 'telethon family' -- everyone who comes out every year to help out or to just show their support," Chloe said. "I look forward to helping plan and set up for the telethon every year."

Jodi finds it "almost impossible to believe that we've reached this milestone. I could not be prouder of my husband for his amazing achievement. He is dedicated, selfless, and compassionate and provides an opportunity every year for all of us to bring out those qualities in ourselves and become better people," she said. "Congratulations, sweetheart, on 40 fantastic years!"

Tolman and everyone involved have had the opportunity "to meet many wonderful, inspiring families battling muscular dystrophy over these many years," he said. "I've witnessed the joys of progress and also the devastating loss of a child or other loved one. Like the Olympians, they are in the race and need our support to capture the gold."

Helping families

There are children and adults in our own communities and across the country who are living with muscular dystrophy and related diseases "that take away from their everyday abilities like walking, running, hugging, getting dressed independently, and even talking and breathing,"

TIP OF THE WEEK

After-school snack hacks for busy kids

School days are long, and if your child participates in after-school activities, they're even longer. Busy kids need plenty of fuel to keep their bodies and minds going.

Laura Fuentes, cookbook author, food blogger and founder of MOMables, has some simple tips to help fight after-school hunger and keep kids going until dinnertime.

Have portable snacks ready. Pack the pantry with wholesome options that both parents and kids love. Additionally, don't overlook fresh fruit that is both healthy and portable.

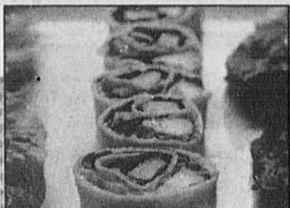

Pack a balanced lunch. Make sure to include protein, healthy fats and carbohydrates, fresh fruits and vegetables in every lunch you pack.

Make a wholesome breakfast. Many kids come home starving because they haven't eaten enough to fuel their day. Making breakfast part of your morning routine is essential for setting kids up for success.

Rule out thirst. Try tucking an extra water bottle in your kid's backpack and offer a cup immediately when they get home. To encourage kids to drink more water, add a touch of flavor and color by placing fresh orange slices or berries inside their cup.

"A Square Meal: A Culinary History of the Great Depression" by Jane Ziegelman and Andrew Coe

From the author of the acclaimed "97 Orchard" and her husband, a culinary historian, an in-depth exploration of the greatest food crisis the nation has ever faced — the Great Depression — and how it transformed America's culinary culture. A "Square Meal" examines the impact of economic contraction and environmental disaster on how Americans ate then — and the lessons and insights those experiences may hold for us today.

Mr. Graham's sweetened legacy

Graham Cracker Cake
pays homage to inventor

The editors of Relish magazine

He's remembered today for Graham crackers, but Sylvester Graham (1794-1851) was known during his lifetime as a health-food advocate. This Connecticut-born Presbyterian minister espoused a vegetarian diet, supplemented by firm, crusty homemade bread made from coarsely ground whole-wheat flour. And while Graham successfully promoted this "graham flour" and the "Graham diet," attracting devotees such as newspaper editor Horace Greeley and utopian Bronson Alcott, it's unclear whether he actually invented the cracker. By 1898, however, the National Biscuit Company (now Nabisco) was producing it. Today's version, made with refined white flour that Graham abhorred, looks (and probably tastes) nothing like the original, but it certainly fills the bill in this cake.

Graham

Unlike other wheat flours, graham flour is made by combining finely ground endosperm with coarsely ground bran and germ. The result is a coarsely textured brown flour with a nutty, sweet taste.

Graham Cracker Cake

Serve with lemon sorbet, ice cream or frozen yogurt.

- Cooking spray
- 6 tablespoons butter, room temperature
- 1 cup packed brown sugar
- 2 eggs
- 1 ½ cups graham cracker crumbs (about 6 cracker sheets)
- ¾ cup brown sugar cookie crumbs (such as Lotus brand Biscoff, about 20 cookies)
- ½ cup whole-wheat flour
- 1 tsp baking powder
- ½ tsp baking soda
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 cup buttermilk
- ½ tsp coarse sugar (optional)
- ½ tsp coarse salt (optional)

1. Preheat oven to 350F. Coat a deep 9-inch cake pan or 9-inch springform pan with cooking spray. Line with parchment.

2. Combine butter and sugar in a mixing bowl. Beat with an electric mixer on medium-high speed until fluffy. Beat in eggs, one at a time, until well blended.

3. Combine graham cracker crumbs, cookie crumbs, flour, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Add crumb mixture to butter mixture, alternately with buttermilk, beating on low speed just until well blended. Scrape batter into prepared pan. Sprinkle top with coarse sugar and coarse salt, if using.

4. Bake 40 minutes, or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out clean. Let cool on a wire rack 10 minutes.

5. Remove from pan and let cool completely. Serves 12.

Corn in a cake? It's better than you think

Have you ever wondered why anyone would want to add vegetables to desserts? Perhaps they are just wanting to be creative. Another reason could be that it's a good way to get their family to eat more veggies.

I admit that it certainly was a good idea when an imaginative baker added carrots to a cake. No doubt about it: Carrot cake has become a classic. After doing some research, I found that carrots were used in a pudding as far back as the 16th century, so it stands to reason that this healthy vegetable would be a tasty ingredient for a cake.

Along with carrots, there have been cakes made with pinto beans, sweet potatoes, zucchini and even kraut. However, when I was looking through an old recipe box and found a recipe called "A-Maize-ing" cake, I had my doubts. I did not think a cake made with cream-style corn could possibly be good.

Realizing that I might be wasting a lot of ingredients, I decided to make the cake anyway. I had to tweak the recipe a little because I wanted to use whatever ingredients I had on hand rather than make a trip to the grocery store.

The can of corn was not as large as the one called for in the recipe, so I had to adjust the amount of flour. I didn't have any raisins, but found some dried cherries, which worked great once I chopped them into smaller pieces.

Instead of all-purpose flour, I used self-rising and just left out the baking powder and salt. I added a little vanilla extract, but the next time I plan to use almond extract.

A-Maize-ing Cherry Nut Cake

- 1 (14.75 oz.) can cream style corn
- ½ cup sugar
- ½ cup firmly-packed light

- brown sugar
- 3 large eggs
- 1 cup oil (I use canola oil)
- ½ cup chopped dried cherries
- ½ cup chopped pecans
- 2 cups self-rising flour
- 1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Grease bottom only of a 9x13x2 inch baking pan. Combine corn, sugar and brown sugar in large mixing bowl. Beat until blended. Add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each. Add oil and beat until mixed. Stir in cherries and pecans. Beat in flour, cinnamon and vanilla until blended. Pour into prepared pan. Bake 35 to 40 minutes, or until a toothpick comes out clean when inserted into center of cake. Cool completely before icing.

NOTE: If using all-purpose

flour, add 1 tablespoon baking powder and 1 teaspoon salt.

Frosting:

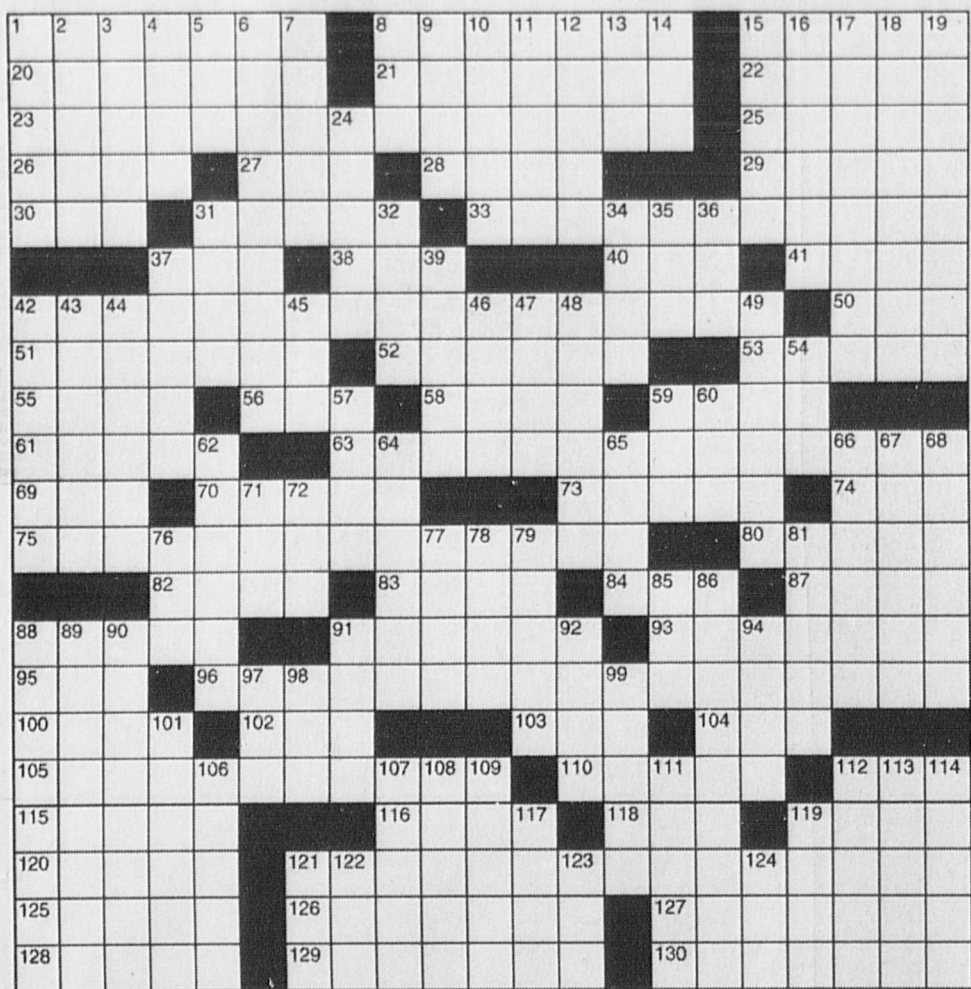

- 3 oz softened cream cheese
- ¼ cup softened butter
- 1 box (16 oz.) confectioners' sugar
- 3 to 4 tablespoons evaporated milk
- ½ cup chopped pecans

Cream together the cream cheese and butter. Add confectioners' sugar and enough milk to make mixture spreadable. Stir in pecans. Spread over cake.

Sudoku

Level: Challenging

Here's How It Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) As tensions ease on the home front, you can once more focus on changes in the workplace. Early difficulties are soon worked out. Stability returns as adjustments are made.
TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) A new romance tests the unattached Bovine's patience to the limit. But Venus still rules the Taurean heart, so expect to find yourself trying hard to make this relationship work.
GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) It's a good time to consider home-related purchases. But shop around carefully for the best price — whether it's a new house for the family or a new hose for the garden.
CANCER (June 21 to July 22) A contentious family member seems intent on creating problems. Best advice: Avoid stepping in until you know more about the origins of this domestic disagreement.
LEO (July 23 to August 22) A recent job-related move proves far more successful than you could have imagined. Look for continued beneficial fallout. Even your critics have something nice to say.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) Ease up and stop driving yourself to finish that project on a deadline that is no longer realistic. Your superiors will be open to requests for an extension. Ask for it.
LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) You should soon be hearing some positive feedback on that recent business move. An old family problem recurs, but this time you'll know how to handle it better.
SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) Some surprising statements shed light on the problem that caused that once-warm relationship to cool off. Use this newly won knowledge to help turn things around.
SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) Your spiritual side is especially strong at this time. Let it guide you into deeper contemplation of aspects about yourself that you'd CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Your merrier aspect continues to dominate and to attract folks who rarely see this side of you. Some serious new romancing could develop out of all this cheeriness.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You're always concerned about the well-being of others. It's time you put some of that concern into your own health situation, especially where it involves nutrition.
PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Just when you thought your life had finally stabilized, along comes another change that needs to be addressed. Someone you trust can help you deal with it successfully.
BORN THIS WEEK: You have a sixth sense when it comes to finding people who need help long before they think of asking for it. And you're right there to provide it.

HOW TO SUBMIT YOUR CALENDAR EVENT

Here are some tips on getting your event information posted to the Wicked Local calendar and included in this regional calendar:

REGISTER: Find the Events Calendar on your Wicked Local homepage in the bottom right portion on the website and click on the Add Event button. Click the Register link in the top right hand corner of your calendar page, above Add Event. Enter an email address, first name, last name, password, and password confirmation. Once you click "Register," a verification email will be sent to the email address with which you registered. Be sure to confirm your account through that email to complete the process. Once registered, you will have the ability to add events.

ADD AN EVENT: Click the Add Event button. Fill in required fields such as event title, date, time, category, and venue. Events may be set up to repeat daily, weekly, monthly, or by manually adding additional dates.

ADDITIONAL NOTES:

■ The more detail the better in the event description field and there is a section to provide optional contact information.
 ■ Categories are important for tagging events with discoverable search terms and eases a visitor's ability to find the type of events they are looking to attend. An event can have multiple categories.
 ■ Events must be matched to a known venue. You can also add a new venue if your venue is not listed.
 ■ Events are subject to review before appearing on the site.

IMAGES: Make sure to include an image with your event. Events with images command three times the attention than those without. EvieSays uses a simple image uploader with options to drag and drop or browse, so adding images to your event is easy.
